Long fears all controls will expire

Congress ponders energy plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Senate tax specialists work out a formula for rebating any windfall oil-company profits to consumers, House parliamentarians are debating whether to send President Ford's latest oil price plan to the floor for a vote.

The House Rules Committee, which controls the flow of legislation to the floor, may decide today whether to clear the way for a House vote on a resolution rejecting Ford's revised oil price plan. The panel is to hear testimony from Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb.

Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, told the Rules Committee on Monday that the full House should have a chance to vote on Ford's plan as quickly as possible.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Commerce subcommittee on energy, also urged sending the Ford plan to the floor but said steps should be taken to allow a floor vote on whether virtually all of Ford's price decontrol plan should be combined with some Democratic proposal for a windfall profits tax.

Such a strategy would be "the best way out of the thicket into which we've wandered," Dingell said.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee today was taking up proposals to return windfall oil company profits to consumers in the event oil price controls expire Aug. 31.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the panel, assumes that Ford and Congress will be unable to resolve their differences over energy policy this week and, therefore, that price controls will expire in five weeks, when Congress is on vacation.

It is widely anticipated that such a sudden expiration would quickly boost prices for gasoline and other petroleum products, and congressional tax experts estimate the oil industry would gain $18 billion in unexpected profits.

Long's committee voted Monday in favor of a windfall profits tax that would collect 90 per cent of oil company profits accruing as a result of the removal of price controls. However, the companies would be allowed to avoid a portion of the tax by reinvesting a greater share of the windfall in the search for more oil and gas.

Committee experts said the tax would collect enough over its six-year life to finance a rebate of $361.29 for every U.S. citizen 16 years and older, regardless of whether the citizen drove autos.

The resolution before the House Rules Committee would reject Ford's latest oil price plan which was sent to Congress last Friday. Under the law, that law automatically goes into effect unless either the House or the Senate votes by a majority to reject it five working days after the President submits it. That deadline is Friday.

Jobless pay changes eyed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State senators were to turn their attention to unemployment compensation today after completing passage Monday night of a bill establishing a college of osteopathic medicine at Ohio University.

The House, also back from weekend recess, added its approval to a Senate measure that seeks to give Ohio a "sunshine law," requiring state and local government agencies to conduct their business in public.

Legislative leaders called for action on several other fronts in their attempt to end summer working sessions Friday. They said members could be called back around Labor Day to consider possible vetoes and complete other routine business.

The unemployment compensation measure, which emerged Monday from the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee, would make major revisions in the existing law and provide substantial increases in maximum payments.

Under the bill, yet to be considered by the House, maximum weekly benefits would range from $95 a week for a claimant with no dependents to $150 for one with three or more dependents. The bill provides generally that an unemployed worker would get 50 per cent of his average weekly wage, not to exceed the prescribed maximums.

Also pending in the Senate is another major bill that hikes Workmen's Compensation benefits. Already approved by the House, it is expected to be acted upon today by the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee, clearing the way for floor action.

Sen. Neil F. Zimmers Jr., D-5 Dayton, won 24-6 approval of the bill that will give Ohio its first and only school of osteopathic medicine on the Athens campus. Opponents argued generally that the southeastern Ohio location was wrong because it lacks clinical facilities where graduates could serve residencies.

Sen. Donald J. Pease, D-13 Oberlin, an Ohio University graduate, offered an unsuccessful amendment that would have established a department of osteopathic medicine at Wright State University near Dayton, where a general medical college is being built.

Pease stressed that while he wants to help his alma mater "any way I can, I just feel that this is not the time and place."

He said the new facility will cost taxpayers up to $40 million within the next 10 years, while use of existing management and support facilities at Dayton would cut the bill sharply.

Pease's amendment was voted down 23-7.

House members voted 86-7 to require open meetings of government agencies, but removed from the bill a provision that set criminal penalties for public officials convicted of violating its terms. Remaining in the legislation is authority for a judge to remove from office those officials violating an injunction prohibiting closed meetings.

The bill contains a list of exceptions for certain types of meetings, such as parole hearings, consultations with an attorney, sale or purchase of land, labor negotiations, the planning of security arrangements, and complaint hearings of the state Ethics Commission.

Rep. Charles F. Kurfess, R-83 Perrysburg, won approval of a floor amendment that removed political party caucuses from the list of exceptions.

He said it was to improve the bill's language and "not to open up political causues." He explained that in the definition section, the bill defines and limits itself to cover public bodies only.

"A political party caucus is not a public body under the language in the bill," he said.

Ford pays tribute to dead in Nazi concentration camp

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — His head bowed in silent prayer, President Ford placed a wreath today at an international monument marking the site of Nazi Germany's Auschwitz gas chambers where millions died in World War II.

Accompanied by Polish Communist party leader Edward Gierek, Ford flew from Krakow airport to the Auschwitz camp by helicopter for the brief ceremony that preceded a presidential speech in Krakow's market square.

Thousands of people from this part of Poland that produced many Polish-Americans streamed into the Old Square from all directions to see the second U.S. president to visit this country. Former President Richard M. Nixon visited Poland in 1972.

Ford's 27-hour visit to Poland was long on ceremonies, short on substance. It did produce a joint statement in which Ford and Polish Communist chief Edward Gierek expressed a "will to achieve progress" in stalled Vienna negotiations aimed at mutual arms reductions in central Europe.

This was considered somewhat significant in that the Communist bloc countries have downplayed the Vienna talks while pushing hard for a nonbinding European security agreement that will be signed in Helsinki this week by Ford, Gierek, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and leaders of 32 other governments in Europe and North America.

Richard Davies, U.S. ambassador to Poland, readily acknowledged to newsmen that, during the Ford visit, "there wasn't an opportunity to break new ground." He attributed this to the successful negotiation of a series of agreements already worked out and announced during a Ford-Gierek meeting in Washington last October.

Mrs. Ford was among the missing during most of the President's ceremonial activities Monday in Warsaw. Her press secretary said the First Lady skipped three events because she was very tired and suffering from "jet lag." She had breast cancer surgery last fall.

Later Monday, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the First Lady was "looking fine and rested" and ready to resume the strenuous 10-day, five-nation tour that began last weekend in West Germany. Nessen said Mrs. Ford had not been ill.

Turk action hurts U.S. spying

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government specialists say the Turkish takeover of key U.S. electronic intelligence-gathering stations has cost the United States about 25 per cent of its ability to monitor Soviet missile launches.

They say this is the most serious loss to the United States as a result of Turkey moving in on U.S. bases in retaliation for the House's refusal to lift an arms embargo against the Turks.

These officials warn that the already sticky problem of atomic test verification being debated by U.S. and Soviet diplomats shaping a new nuclear arms limitation agreement would be made even more difficult without the ground stations operating from Turkey.

White House and State Department officials are reported working behind the scenes for a reversal of the House decision, which came on a close 223-206 vote last Thursday. President Ford sent House Speaker Carl Albert a letter Monday, saying: "My responsibility for the national security and conduct of foreign affairs have led me to urge in the strongest terms that the House lift the embargo." The Senate already has approved an end to the embargo.

In the view of Pentagon officials, the most important of some two dozen U.S. installations in Turkey are four stations that beam radar and other sensitive electronic sensors into the Soviet Union.

These stations intercept Soviet communications traffic which keeps the United States informed about Russian military movements, track Soviet satellites and monitor test and training launches of missiles from bases in central Russia.

The electronic devices enable the United States to keep constantly abreast of Russian progress in developing advanced weapons.

The United States observes much of what Russia does from satellites which pass over the Soviet Union equipped with sophisticated cameras, infrared sensors, and other instruments.

But there are gaps between the times when these satellies are over Russian territory as they travel in globe-circling orbits. That is why U.S. intelligence experts consider very vital the round-the-clock, fulltime coverage provided by the powerful ground stations within range of the Soviet Union.

Malpractice bill okayed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — All Ohio doctors and hospitals are guaranteed malpractice insurance coverage under a new state law signed Monday night by Gov. James A. Rhodes.

The legislation, which takes effect immediately, established a Joint Underwriters Association to provide coverage to physicians in "high risk" specialties and others unable to acquire protection through private firms.

The new law also sets a $200,000 limit on the amount a victim can recover for pain and suffering damages through legal proceedings. No limit was set on total legal recovery.

"I believe Ohio has taken the important first step in solving the medical malpractice crisis...," Rhodes said. "The legislation represents a fair compromise for all parties involved in the malpractice problem, including doctors, lawyers, patients, legislators and representatives of the insurance industry."

In fact, considerable compromise was necessary to fashion a bill acceptable to interest groups which lobbied heavily on both sides of the issue.

The Ohio State Bar Association dropped opposition to the plan last week after a joint conference committee removed a section that would have limited contingency fees often collected by lawyers representing victims.

By county commissioners

Mental health levy approved for ballot

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners approved a resolution Monday to certify an additional .50-mill operating levy by the Fayette County Board of Mental Retardation on the November general election ballot.

The commission received the request by Carl Whitaker, administrator of the Fayette Progressive School for the mentally handicapped, who cited increased operational costs and enrollment necessitating additional funding for the school, located in the former Sunnyside Elementary School building on S. Fayette Street.

Whitaker said the .50-mill additional tax levy would be retired in 1986. An additional .65-mill operating levy sought for the school was soundly defeated by Fayette County voters during the 1974 November general election.

The school is presently operating on a .35-mill levy. The operating levy will expire at the end of next year.

In other business, the commissioners granted a request by Fayette County engineer Charles P. Wagner to resurface two county roads, at an estimated $50,000 total cost, and authorized Wagner to begin advertising for bids for the road construction materials.

The roads to be resurfaced include Robinson Road for 2.74 miles from White Road to Camp Grove Road, at an estimated $35,399.80, and Bogus Road from Robinson Road to U.S. 35 for 1.041 miles at a proposed cost of $11,301.80.

Wagner also presented the engineer's profiles and maps on the joint-county Ellis ditch project. Wagner told the

Obscure measure holds pay boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — It might not be apparent from reading the title of the measure, but the Senate is considering a bill to increase the salaries of Congress and other top federal officials.

The bill is listed on the Senate's legislative calendar as an act to amend Title 39, United States Code, to apply to the Postal Service certain provisions of law providing for federal agency safety programs and responsibilities and for other purposes.

In an unannounced action on Friday, the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee added the pay raise section to a House-passed bill to require the Postal Service to comply with the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The new section would give salary increases to Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, Cabinet members, top-level executive officials, federal judges and members of Congress.

The amount of the increases would depend on how much of a cost-of-living adjustment President Ford recommends for government employes in general. For example, a 5 per cent increase would boost the annual pay of a member of Congress from $42,500 to $44,625.

The Senate opened debate on the bill Monday night. The legislation was defended as simple justice and denounced as a backdoor attempt to insulate Congress from the effects of inflation.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., the Post Office committee chairman, said the raises are needed to attract talented people to government jobs. He said the number of people involved represent only 1 per cent of the federal payroll.

Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, the committee's ranking Republican, spoke of "hardpressed federal officials in the upper echelon" who he said have "suffered long enough from congressional inaction."

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., announced he wil offer an amendment to exclude members of Congress from the pay increase provision. If Congress members were excluded, "I think you will see enthusiasm for the bill greatly dampened," he said.

Allen and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind-Va., complained that the pay raise was buried in a bill having nothing to do with pay raises, and Allen said members of Congress traditionally have sought to avoid a vote squarely on the issue of whether their own salary should be raised.

Sale of missiles to Jordan deferred

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with congressional opposition, the Ford administration has deferred its proposed sale of 14 Hawk missile batteries to Jordan.

A number of legislators have criticized the proposed sale on the grounds the number of batteries is excessive and would tip the balance of power in the Middle East.

The Ford administration's deferral of its request for congressional approval, announced Monday, takes pressure off Congress which has 20 days in which it can veto proposed military sales to foreign governments. The period would have run out Wednesday, shortly before the legislators are set to begin an August recess.

A critic of the sale, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said he hopes the administration will use the extra time to go back to Jordan's King Hussein to make sure he is "taking into account the views of the committee regarding the 14 batteries."

There were conflicting accounts of whether the deferral meant the administration is ready to scale down the $350-million proposal, which already has been voted down by the House International Relations Committee.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the deferral came because his panel and the House committee had developed "overwhelming evidence" that the proposed sale is excessive.

"I hope that any new notice sent to the Congress after the August recess will reflect what I see as the overwhelming concern in Congress that the proposed sale to Jordan was larger than her requirements for purely defensive purposes," Case said. He also said the deferral "leaves the door open for a possible compromise."

But State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said the deferral was only a chance "for resubmitting the notification (of the sale) within a time framework which would permit Congress to deal with the issue." He said, "There is no change" in the numbers of missiles proposed.

The formal withdrawal came in a letter from Robert S. Ingersoll, acting secretary of state, who said the administration is prepared to extend the legal 20-day period as much as three times by withdrawing and then resubmitting its formal sales proposal.

Rail reorganization response is mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-awaited government reorganization plan for ailing Northeast railroads has won a mixed reaction in Congress but also pledges that action will be taken on the problem promptly.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate Transportation subcommittee handling the problem, said the federal planners who announced the plan Monday were to be commended for their work.

But he said some changes in the plan clearly were needed. His panel already has conducted hearings on parts of the plan and will complete these soon after Congress returns from its August recess.

The Indiana Senator said his panel then will draft legislation to implement the plan, embodying some of its own ideas.

Hartke said he was confident Congress could enact the legislation this year.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., senior Republican on the subcommittee, was not enthusiastic about the proposal. He called it "A mishmash which does not go nearly far enough."

After the outlines of the plan became known earlier in the year, many members of Congress criticized it for proposing to eliminate thousands of miles of track.

Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., repeated such criticism Monday. He said such a large abandonment would cost many jobs, and urged that there be a two-year moratorium on any such withdrawals.

The plan would consolidate seven railroads into a 15,000-mile system to be known as ConRail, stretching from the Atlantic to the Mississippi River. Backbone of the system would be the bankrupt Penn Central.

Also covered by the plan are the Erie Lackawanna, the Reading, the Central of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley, and Lehigh and Hudson River, and the Ann Arbor.

The U.S. Railway Association said the reoganization would be the largest corporate reorganization in American history.

Space fumes caused by crew slipup

HONOLULU (AP) — A slipup by the Apollo astronauts caused poisonous rocket fumes to flow into their cabin as they headed for a Pacific Ocean splashdown ending a joint U.S.-Soviet space flight, space agency officials say.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials declined to call it pilot error.

They said the U.S. spacemen may have failed to throw two necessary switches because an electronic squeal disrupted communications in the Apollo. The two switches were to start an automatic landing system.

The official account of the incident was released Monday as Thomas P. Stafford, Donald K. Slayton and Vance D. Brand prepared to end a four-day hospitalization. They were being taken to secluded quarters today to begin 10 days in isolation.

The astronauts are to continue tape recording their accounts of the mission during their isolation. The seclusion was ordered because their gas-inflamed lungs are vulnerable to infection.

Dr. Glynn S. Lunney, technical director of the Apollo-Soyuz mission which ended last Thursday, said precise details of what caused the gas leak are still unclear.

A lapse in communication apparently occurred between Slayton, who was calling off checklist items, and Brand, who was to have switched the automatic system on.

Failure to throw the switches as the Apollo command module was dropping toward an ocean splashdown meant that small steering rocket motors were not shut off.

One of the motors was located on the outside of the module.

Violence reported in West Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Sporadic incidents of violence plagued a small section of west Detroit early today following a night of skirmishing between police hurling tear-gas and angry black youths responding with rocks.

A police spokesman termed the situation in the LivernoisFenkell area of the city as "pretty stable" but said there were some incidents of looting outside the area where hundreds of young blacks roamed beginning about 8 p.m. Monday.

Police said the incident was touched off when a white bar owner shot a young black. Police said the bar owner, Andrew Chinarian, 39, told them he shot the man when he found him tampering wih Chinarian's car. Chinarian, who was not charged, turned himself in and was released to his own custody, police said. He was to report for further questioning today.

Obie Wynn, 18, of Detroit was taken to Mount Carmel Mercy Hospital with gunshot wounds. Police said he was in critical condition.

Shortly after the shooting, crowds gathered near the bar and youths ocasionally tossed Molotov cocktails.

Officer Don Nash said that between 500 and 700 policemen were called to the four-squareblock area in the run-down section of the city. Many wore riot gear and carried carbines.

On one block, half-a-dozen blacks stood guard inside a black-owned discount store, cradling small semi-automatic weapons.

Small groups of youths were reported still in the debris-littered skirmish area early today.

Police said a total of 36 persons were arrested, most for malicious destruction of property.

A policeman was hospitalized after being hit in the forehead with a brick. Several police cars were set fire, one burning to the pavement while about 100 persons stood and cheered. Several empty stores were set ablaze, and firemen were hampered by rock-throwing crowds.

Borden reports earnings rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Borden, Inc. reported a record 6.1 per cent increase in second quarter income today, company officials announced.

Augustine R. Marusi, chairman and chief executive officer, said net income for the three months ended June 30 totaled $26.4 million, compared to $24.9 million a year ago.

Primary earnings per share were 86 cents during the quarter compared to 81 cents in 1974. Second quarter sales were $876.6 million, a 4.4 per cent gain from $839.6 million last year.

First half sales totaled $1.67 billion, an increase of 8.2 per cent.

Economic indicators show improvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's index of leading business indicators rose 1.9 per cent in June, pointing to an improved economy in months ahead, the Commerce Department said today. It was the fourth consecutive month the indicators have pointed to improvement.

The department also reported a record trade surplus during the second quarter of the year of $3.5 billion and a record surplus in the first half of 1975 of nearly $5.5 billion.

Imports of petroleum and petroleum products were reported down to an average of just under 5.7 million barrels a day in the second quarter of the year, compared with an average of slightly more than 6.2 million barrels a day in the first quarter. Cost of oil imports was listed at $5.9 billion, down from $6.5 billion in the first quarter.

The Commerce Department said eight of the nine categories in its index of leading indicators increased in June. This was led by an improvement in total liquid assets of financial institutions. Also increasing were average work week, sales deliveries, changes in prices of a select category of goods, stock prices, the money supply, new orders from business and building permits.

The only indicator that fell was contracts and orders for plant and equipment.

The increase of 1.9 per cent in the indicators put the index at 98.3 per cent of the 1967 average of 100, the highest since last October when it was 103.

The index had increased 2.2 per cent in May and 3.4 per cent in April.

The Commerce Department recently revised the indicators index to provide what it feels is a more accurate measure of business trends in the economy. But it is also reporting the old index, and this declined 1.4 per cent in June, the first drop since it was replaced.

It is possible to make meaningful comparisons between the new index and business indicators of past years since the Commerce Department revised past indices to reflect the new system of economic measurement.

The Commerce Department report on second quarter trade follows by a day its report on Monday that the nation had a trade surplus in June of $1.7 billion, which was a record.

The quarterly trade report was on a balance-of-payments basis, meaning it excludes military trade of U.S. defense agencies and other adjustments that are included in the monthly trade reports.

The Commerce Department said the trade improvement resulted from a larger reduction in imports than in exports, with imports declining $3 billion, to a total $22.3 billion while exports declined $1.4 billion to a total of $25.8 billion.

It said the changes were due primarily to steep reductions in imports of petroleum and other industrial supplies, and in exports of agricultural commodities, which declined 22 per cent to $4.9 billion in the second quarter.

Report coup in Nigeria

PARIS (AP) — Gen. Yakubu Gowon, military ruler of oilrich Nigeria, the world's largest black nation, has been overthrown in a bloodless coup, according to broadcasts from the West African nation.

In Kampala, the Ugandan capital, 40-year-old Gowon left a session of the Organization of African Unity summit meeting and returned to his hotel room. The summit meeting was suspended.

Gowon was calm and smiling, but evidently had seen news dispatches from Lagos, capital of the nation of 60 million people.

Summery weather covers U.S.

By the Associated Press

Most of the country was treated to typically warm cloudless midsummer weather today, with only a few showers predicted for Southern areas and thunderstorms in parts of the West.

Skies were clear from the northern half of the Great Plains eastward through the Mississippi Valley and into the northern Appalachians. California and most of Texas also had sunny skies.

Mild temperatures and widely scattered afternoon showers and thunderstorms were forecast for the Intermountain and Rocky Mountain regions into the western portion of the Great Plains. The Northern Plains were expected to have temperatures in the 80s.

Scattered showers and thundershowers were likely over the South Atlantic Coast states west through the Gulf Coast states into eastern Texas and north into Kentucky, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

It was expected to be hot in the northern and central Great Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.

A cold front brought cloudy skies to the Pacific Northwest, where light rain fell overnight.

Rain also fell overnight from New England south through the Appalachians. It also stretched along the Gulf coast to Eastern Texas and north into southern parts of Kansas and Missouri.

Predawn temperatures ranged from from 46 at Evanston, Wyo., to 92 at Phoenix, Ariz.

Dionne Warwicke sues songwriters

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Dionne Warwicke has filed a $5.5 million suit against songwriters Burt Bacharach and Hal David, alleging breach of contract.

The suit filed Monday in Superior Court said the songwriters had failed to keep a 1971 agreement to produce one album a year for four years with the singer. It said that the songs on her first album had been written by the pair but that despite several extensions, they had not writen the songs used for her second and third albums.

The suit, which asked $5 million in punitive damages and $500,000 in compensatory damages, claimed Miss Warwicke's career suffered as a result of the songwriters' failure to compose for her.

A spokesmen for Bacharach said he would have no comment. David was not immediately available for comment.

Congress overrides health bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress today overrode President Ford's veto of a $2 billion health bill, the first time in five tries this session that the House mustered enough votes to enact into law a measure that Ford rejected.

The vote was 348 to 43, or 99 votes more than the two-thirds majority necessary to override.

The Senate met in a rare weekend session Saturday to override Ford's veto 67 to 15.

In his veto message, Ford called the health package excessively costly and said some program duplicated existing health efforts.

Investigator denies licensing convict

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An investigator under fire in the relicensing of an escaped mental patient says he never was assigned to the case.

Fred Davis of the Medical Registration and Examination Board said Monday, "I can't be guilty of negligence because I was never assigned to the case."

He also accused two aides to Gov. Otis R. Bowen of not doing a very thorough job of investigating before saying he and Joseph D. O'Brien were to blame.

O'Brien, board administrator, and Davis were recommended for disciplinary action after Robert Hales was hired as a prison doctor. Hales, a former physician, was convicted as a criminal sexual psychopath.

Safeguarding the Redwoods

Sometimes it seems that the courts take too much upon themselves. Then again it is good to see the courts ride herd on the government in the common interest. As, for example, when a federal judge ordered the Interior Department to do more about protecting the ecology of Redwood National Park in California.

The Sierra Club has charged that Interior was neglectful in safeguarding the forest from erosion and other bad effects of lumbering operations. The court agreed. It is a victory for all who want as much as possible of our natural heritage preserved for the enjoyment of this and future generations.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . . By John P. Roche

Keeping the tabbies tame

There aren't many laughs in politics these days, but on July 10th President For interrupted the seemingly endless wake for the Central Intelligence Agency with a bit of stand-up humor worthy of Groucho Marx. He solemnly summoned to the White House the chairmen of the many Federal regulatory agencies and told them to lay off. To be precise, he called for a "maximum freedom for private enterprise" and chided the agencies (such as the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Communications Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission) for allegedly harassing businessmen.

Anyone who knows anything about the activities of these so-called independent regulatory agencies immediately appreciated that the President was in effect telling a bunch of toothless tabbies to stop being tigers. With few exceptions these agencies have long since been bagged up by the business interests they are supposed to regulate. Occasionally there will be an internal feud: the Interstate Commerce Commission, long a fiefdom of the railroads, faced in recent years a take-over bid by the truckers. And there have been various brawls in the Federal Communications Commission over the application of the "fairness doctrine," but Walter Cronkite put reality in a nutshell when he said of the networks, "We're big and we're powerful enough to thumb our nose at threats from the government, and I hope it stays that way."

The history of these agencies is interesting. Around the turn of the century there was a great outcry against corruption. What know they of corruption who only Watergate know? By current standards the situation was unbelievable. Henry Demerest Lloyd, one of the leading "muckrakes" (as Theodore Roosevelt, in a moment of anger, denoted the reformers) observed accurately that the only thing that Standard Oil could not do with the Pennsylvania legislature was refine it! The so-called "Robber Barons" were not without charm — one of them observed after a particularly ingenious raid upon the public interest that "nothing was lost but honor."

The thrust of the reformer's position was that regulating the "interests" could only be achieved by taking them out of politics. (This paralleled the effort to end corruption in government by establishing civil service as the alternative to patronage.) They decided that the chosen instruments for this depoliticization should be independent commissions whose members were appointed for set terms and were not responsible to the President. The staggered terms varied from agency to agency, averaging about seven years, though the members of the Federal Reserve Board are in for 14. They float in the constitutional blue, being subject to direction from neither the President nor Congress, a fact which often makes it very hard for an Administration adequately to implement policy — since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board have been at daggers drawn.

The first big effort came in the 1880s with a drive to regulate the railroads, which were joyously operating in a lucrative limbo created by the Supreme Court, which had held them immune to state regulation. Understandably the managers took a dim view of the proposed Interstate Commerce Commission, but in 1892 their crack lawyer, Richard S. Olney (later U.S. Attorney General), took a different view. He urged support for the Commission because it "can be made of great use to the railroads. It satisfies the popular clamor for a government supervision of railroads, at the same time that that supervision is almost entirely nominal."

Then Olney, with brilliant prescience, anticipated the history of all such commissions: "Further, the older such a commission gets to be, the more inclined it will be found to take the business and railroad view of things. It thus becomes a sort of barrier between the railroad corporations and the people and a sort of protection against hasty and crude legislation hostile to railroad interests. . . The part of wisdom is not to distroy the Commission, but to utilize it."

Well, Mr. President, I trust the tabbies will become even more somnolent, and thanks for a good laugh.

U.S. records trade surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a big drop in oil imports, the United States had a record monthly trade surplus in June of more than $1.7 billion, the government said today.

It was the fifth straight monthly surplus in the surprisingly strong trade sector of the economy, the Commerce Department said.

The quantity of oil imported during June fell 26 per cent from May, to a low for the year of nearly 118.2 million barrels. It had been 159 million barrels in May.

By importing less oil, the United States saved $499 million over May, as the value of oil imports declined to slightly more than $1.3 billion, also a low for the year. May oil imports were valued at more than $1.8 billion.

The Commerce Department said the nation's trade surplus for the first six months of the year totaled more than $5.4 billion, compared with a deficit of more than $2.4 billion last year.

Ohio labor force reaches 4,910,302

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's labor force was estimated at 4,910,302 at the end of June, with a 9.1 per cent unemployment rate, the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services said.

The OBES division of research and statistics estimated that 446,268 Ohioans were out of work at the end of the month.

The bureau said 55 per cent of all Ohioans are employed in the state's seven largest counties.

Adams County, leading the state with 18.6 per cent unemployment, has the smallest labor force of 6,526. Cuyahoga County has a 739,186-member labor force and an unemployment rate of 8.8 per cent.

Consumer credit measure pushed

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A House subcommittee is studying a bill which would require credit reporting agencies to send copies of credit reports to the person being reported upon.

The bill, presently in the consumer subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, would significantly expand the rights of consumers to know the contents of credit reports about themselves.

The measure is sponsored by Rep. John Thompson, D-15 Cleveland, who said the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act does not go far enough to protect the privacy of individuals.

"The system of credit reporting is an industry which works in secret," Thompson said. "Because under the act the credit reporting agency is not even required to let a person see his files, only hear what is in them, it is possible for inaccuracies to exist which brand a person for life."

Thompson said persons have been refused insurance, bank loans and credit because of false information in their credit files. He said consumers now have little chance to correct those errors.

Under his bill, when a business requests a credit report on an individual, the individual must also receive a copy of the report and the name of the business requesting the check.

"The cost to the credit reporting companies would be minimal," Thompson said. "Only the price of an envelope and a stamp.

"The benefit in human terms would be far greater. We will be providing access by individuals to information about their own lives which had never been provided before, and we could help eliminate some of the abuses which have occurred in the past."

Thompson said he doesn't want to kill the credit reporting business. He said it serves a legitimate function in the business world.

"I am only trying to maintain the right of privacy, which the individual has lost and eliminate this right of secrecy which these credit investigating agencies have acquired."

In ancient Rome, the Emperor Nero proclaimed that only he could wear the purpole, a fabric colored with extracts from murex shellfish. Seafaring Phoenician merchants made the regal dye and grew rich selling purple wool for about $150 a pound, the National eographic Society says.

DEAR ABBY: You indicated that you were in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment. I am amazed at you. And the men and women will not have seperate quarters in college dorms, prisons, schools, locker rooms, and even public hospitals? Do your homework!

DEAR AGAINST: Do yours! In 1965, the Supreme Court established the consitutional right to privacy. This permits the separation of the sexes in all places involving sleeping, disrobing and all other private functions.

DEAR ABBY: I have been teaching Sunday school for five years. I teach first-grade children who are 6-years-old.

My problem is the pastor's son. This child pulls rank on me at every turn I make. He lets me know that because he is the pastor's son, I can't tell him what to do.

You can imagine what this does to me and the other children. I get absolutely no cooperation from his parents. The father is merely an older replica of his son.

What can I DO TO REMEDY THIS SITUATION? I am fond of my class and love to teach, but I can't take much more verbal abuse or the kicking this child dishes out. I've bent over backwards to be nice to him but get nowhere.

DEAR MIS: Discipline him as though he were the son of Joe Blow. And if he doesn't shape up, tell his parents to keep the boy at home, or YOU'LL stay home.

DEAR FIRE MARSHALL: You are right, of course. Now, why didn't I think of that?

DEAR ABBY: You gave good advice to the widow who didn't know what to tell people when they asked how her husband had died. (He committed suicide.)

I'd like to reinforce your view. Many years ago, when I was the editor of a small newspaper, one of the town's leading citizens, who was also an attorney and church leader, made some bad investments. Shortly thereafter, he killed himself.

His two daughters, who were my cherished friends, sent their boyfriends to ask me to please leave out that their father had committed suicide when his death was reported in the paper. The competing newspaper agreed to omit it if we would.

I refused, saying, "If we omit it, the girls will be living a lie for the rest of their lives. If we print the truth, it will be forgotten in 24 hours."

I published the truth and the family admitted afterward that I had done the right thing. They also bought 50 newspapers.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, July 29, the 210th day of 1975. There are 155 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1959, Hawaii voted for the first time as a state and elected the first Orientals to be seated in the U.S. Congress.

On this date:

In 1030, the patron saint of Norway, King Olaf, was killed in battle.

In 1890, the Dutch painter, Vincent van Gogh, died after shooting himself.

In 1914, a conversation between New York and San Francisco marked the beginning of transcontinental telephone service.

In 1937, 18-year-old Crown Prince Farouk was invested as king of Egypt.

In 1945, U.S. B29 bombers dropped 3,500 tons of fire bombs on six Japanese cities during World War Two.

In 1967, fire aboard the U.S. Aircraft Carrier Forrestal off North Vietnam took 134 lives.

Ten years ago: The Johnson Administration, which was stepping up the American role in Vietnam, disclosed plans to increase U.S. military forces by about 330,000 men.

Five years ago: A crippling two-week dock strike in Britain was called off.

One year ago: Episcopal church law was defied as eleven women were ordained priests in Philadelphia.

Today's birthdays: Writer Owen Lattimore is 75.

See 8 per cent price increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices paid by the average American are expected to rise about 8 per cent during 1975 as a whole, compared with 12.2 per cent last year, the Council on Wage and Price Stability reports.

The council said that the Consumer Price Index during the first quarter of the year rose at a rate of 6 per cent and that the economic recovery during the second half of this year should not cause prices to rise more quickly.

Ship survivor recalls sharks

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP)— The current wave of shark fear brought on by the movie "Jaws," is nothing new to a group of former seamen who will gather this weekend at Indianapolis, Ind.

The 316 survivors of the sinking of the USS Indianpolis in the South Pacific July 30, 1945, no doubt will be talking about the movie as well, according to former boatswain's mate James E. Reid of Middletown, Ohio.

Reid, who recently suffered a heart attack, is hoping his doctor will give him permission to see the film and attend the reunion.

"I really want to see it," said Reid, one of the survivors of the crew of 1,196. He was among those who watched helplessly as some 300 shipmates were killed by sharks.

"I would really like to see how they deal with the shark attacks" in the film, said Reid, who works for an insurance firm.

He recalled that the Indianapolis was returning to Leyte, in the Philippines after delivering component parts for the first Atomic Bomb dropped on Japan to the base on Tinian. The cruiser was sunk by a torpedo fired by a Japanese submarine.

Reid said the ship sank in 12 minutes leaving the crew no time to send out an SOS or utilize the lifeboats. He said the situation was further complicated because the craft was off course which hindered rescue efforts.

"We had to get away from the ship fast or the current would have sucked us under," recalled Reid who later testified in a courts martial of the ship's commander.

"We could see the feet of the men who got caught in the ship's suction sticking up out of the water."

The first day the survivors thought the Japanese would take them prisoner. "But by that night we realized they weren't coming."

Reid said they had no food or water for five days.

"The sharks would come up underneath the float and grab for our legs. We had to kick and scream to scare them away."

By the third day, the men were fighting among themselves. Some were hallucinating because they drank the sea water, Reid said.

"One of them said he saw General MacArthur standing on an island which he said was only a hundred yards away. He started swimming away, and then a shark got him," said Reid, recalling this happened to many of the men.

"They'd start swimming and then we'd see a shark's fin going towards them. Then they would disappear, and their life preserver would pop up to the surface empty."

The survivors were rescued five days after the sinking. Reid said it took two days to get everyone out of the water.

Reid was later called to Washington D.C. to testify against Capt. Charles V. McVay. McVay was convicted of failing to keep the ship on the proper course.

Massive arson project planned

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Battelle Memorial Insitutue has been hired to evaluate arson education in the United States and to assess resources available to combat the problem in Ohio.

The Ohio FAIR Plan Underwriting Association said its board of governors had authorized the study to begin immediately.

The FAIR Plan (Fair Access to Insurance Requirements) is a pool of fire insurance companies licensed to do business in Ohio. It said arson was one of the most diffficult crimes to investigate.

"A successful arsonist burns up almost all of the evidence of his crime," said William Morris, chairman of the FAIR Plan board of governors.

"It takes a lot of training to enable insurance and law enforcement investigators to gather evidence and trace it to the arsonist," he added.

Battelle's Columbus laboratories will conduct the four-month study of existing arson-prevention and investigation programs. It is to interview arson education experts throughout the nation.

Battelle said there are more than 40,000 arson-related fires in Ohio each year, causing more destruction of $73 million in property and an uncounted number of human lives.

"Yet only about 10 per cent of the arson cases are ever investigated and less than three per cent result in convictions," Battelle said. "The odds, obviously, are overwhelming in favor of the arsonist," the international research organization added.

The total cost of the research is estimated at be between $400,000 and $500,000.

Battelle is expected to come up with a way in which information obtained during the research can be used in a plan for an arson-training and public-awareness program.

Eugene L. Jewell, chief of the state arson bureau and chairman of the Blue Ribbon Arson Committee, said the Battelle study would be "the most comprehensive professional research project of its kind in the United States."

"The reduction of arson in Ohio requires much more than just the traditional hit-and-miss approach," Jewell said.

The committee suggested a follow-up plan that would include arson training for law enforcement officers, the insurance industry and state insurance officials who deal with arson. It also suggested a documentary film with "national impact" be produced on the subject.

Ohio Insurance Director Harry V. Jump stressed the public-awareness aspects of the proposal.

"By and large," Jump said, "the public does not see arson as a direct threat to its own safety or security in the same way as it does many other crimes, such as armed robbery."

However, he said, each fire has the potential of harming both firefighters and private citizens. Firefighting costs and insurance claims must eventually be absorbed by the public, he added.

Controlling board seen powerless

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State Controlling Board met Monday and agreed it no longer existed, or at least was powerless to act.

However, a compromise was reported in the House that will reactivate the agency later this week, perhaps as early as Wednesday.

Barry Keefe, the board's president, and the other six members agreed that line item vetoes by Gov. James A. Rhodes in the state budget bill June 29 took away most if not all the board's authority.

Rhodes rejected several items in the budget which put under the board's control several appropriations he said should have gone directly to state departments. He charged majority Democrats with trying to usurp powers of the executive branch.

The vehicle for the compromise is a bill approved last week by the Senate that would establish the board in permanent law. It may be acted on in the House today.

In the past, the board has been perpetuated by language contained in each two-year appropriations measure.

Keese said he would reconvene the board so it can resume its business when Rhodes receives and signs the immediately effective emergency bill.

Made up of six legislators and Keefe, who represents the administration, the board's duties consist generally of releasing funds to the various departments and seeing that they are spent for the purposes intended by the legislature.

Total taxes levied hit $1.450 billion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Total taxes levied in 1974 by all governmental agenices in Ohio's cities upon real estate, public utility and tangible personal property amounted to $1.450 billion, the Ohio Public Expenditure Council said Monday.

The council said the total was an increase of $76.6 million, or 5.6 per cent, over 1973.

Property taxes for schools in the cities accounted for $53.5 million, or 68 per cent of the increase. The figure does not include the 10 per cent real property tax rollback or homestead exemption authorized by law.

Property taxes for schools in the cities went over the $1 billion mark for the first time, the council said. The total was $1,082.002 billion.

The 10 largest Ohio cities accounted for $642.7 million of the total property taxes levied. There are 232 Ohio cities.

Ohio had another clear, mild night with temperatures at daybreak ranging from 57 in Youngstown to 71 along the Ohio River in the extreme southern part of the state.

High pressure over Ohio this morning was drifting slowly east to New York and Pennsylvania. A nearly stationary front across West Virginia and Kentucky was gradually weakening and was expected to disappear from the weather map.

Skies will be sunny for the next couple of days although some cloudiness will form over the southern counties. Showers should remain south of the Ohio River.

A gradual warming trend will be the main weather feature. Afternoon highs will be close to 90 in parts of central and southern Ohio today and in many sections of the state Wednesday. Little change is likely in the weather pattern through the week until a chance of showers appears about the end of the week.

Ohio Extended Outlook (Thursday through Saturday)

Fair Thursday and Friday and a chance of showers Saturday. Highs in the upper 80s and low 90s. Lows in the 60s.

Medical college awarded grant

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio State University College of Medicine has been awarded a $2.7 million federal grant toward construction of a health professions facility, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Monday.

The total cost of the project is $12.7 million.

Flurry of bills passed by House

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State lawmakers began their expected final week of the summer session Monday with a flurry of action on bills, some of them individual members' projects.

Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, who fought for Ohio's ratification of the federal women's Equal Rights Amendment, won 29-0 Senate approval of a bill prohibiting discriminatory credit practices.

Her measure, which now goes to the House, bans in particular any discrimination in the extension of credit on the basis of sex or marital status. It provides that the grantors of credit must use the same criteria for all applicants.

"It will permit all Ohioans, regardless of sex and marital status, to participate fully in our economy," the senator asserted.

In other action, the Senate added its approval to House measures that permit the issuance of food stamps to new applicants within 24 hours if the applicant is destitute, and to ban trespassing in township cemeteries after dark.

At a night floor session that lasted more than three hours, the House approved and sent the Senate measures to:

—Repeal an antiquated statute authorizing cities to build railroads, but allow creation of a board of trustees for a railroad owned by Cincinnati.

—Establish a procedure for recalling township trustees.

—Provide for the licensing of county homes by the state Health Department.

—Authorize the use of hearing examiners by local boards of health.

—Remove a limit on the number of women who may serve on public library boards.

—Authorize state and local participation in the federal Health Planning and Resources Development Act.

—Establish a Board of Regents program leading to licensing of graduates of foreign medical schools to practice in Ohio.

—Excuse delinquent taxes for churches which failed to apply for exemptions.

Lake Superior pollution heavy in some spots

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — There is extensive pollution in several areas of Lake Superior, reports the International Joint Commission, but the overall quality of Lake Superior's water is very good.

The IJC, in its annual report on Lake Superior's water quality, said the major pollution problem areas of the lake are the harbor of Duluth, Minn., and Superior Wis.; Silver Bay, Minn.; Thunder Bay, Ont., and along the lake's south shore in Wisconsin.

However, the report noted that efforts are under way to abate the pollution in all areas mentioned.

The commission's report said the major source of water pollution in the Silver Bay area continues to be taconite wastes discharged into the lake from Reserve Mining Co.'s taconite processing plant at Silver Bay.

Reserve is under a federal appeals court order to switch to on-land disposal of the taconite tailings, which contain tiny asbestos fibers that have been linked to cancer.

Roberto appointed to education panel

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Ohio Rep. Marcus A. Roberto, D-62 Ravenna, has been appointed to the Education Commission of the States. He is chairman of the Ohio House Education Committee.

The ECS is an interstate organization of 45 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. It includes public officials and educators from each state or territory.

New jobs for women

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

WOMEN are breaking barriers and taking over jobs that once were the sole province of men, jobs far removed from shorthand, typing and conventional "openings for women."

At Phillips Petroleum's Avon refinery in Martinez, Calif., three have become the first peacetime female "yardmen" in company history. All had previously held routine "women" jobs:

Pat Brown, 24, was a waitress; Martha Buckingham, 32, a teacher and, later, a secretary; Mary Krajewski, 21, a golf course greenkeeper, an assistant to a seamstrress and a cocktail waitress.

In the line of Heavy Duty

In their new posts they do far different work — pushing wheelbarrows, shoveling coke, assisting in cleanups, operating jackhammers, digging ditches, driving fork lift units and heavy duty trucks, scrubbing concrete, cleaning storage tanks, climbing high on refinery columns and working inside refinery vessels.

What attracted them to heavy-duty jobs? Pay that was higher than any received in any of their previous posts.

The work is physically demanding but, they say, it's worth the effort because they couldn't earn as much in office or restaurant jobs.

Record Time

Their first morning on the job, the all-girl trio was assigned to dig a 200-foot-long ditch. Determined to prove themselves, they worked like demons for a half a day and were leaning on their shovels when the foreman arrived. He started chewing them out for goofing off, but his tirade stopped short when, to his embarrassment, he discovered that the job, programmed for two days, was completed.

Reaction from refinery co-workers has ranged from curiosity to amusement. One man approached Martha Buckingham on the job, looked her over and announced, "Well, now I've seen everything!"

"No you haven't," she told him. "You haven't seen anything until I'm made foreman!"

Throughout industry men are reacting and trying to adjust to women in new roles. One field they're beginning to conquer is security:

At General Motors' Hydramatic Division plant in Michigan two women have been added to the security staff. Their duties involve checking passes, directing traffic, keeping track of trucks and other vehicles moving through the gates and patrolling the plant.

"You have to be super-alert," one of the new officers, Sandra Richards, observed. "The plant is deserted at night. When you're making rounds, you have to be ready to use common sense in a tight spot."

A national security services firm, Guardsmark, Inc., is also employing women. They guard high rise buildings, airports, hospitals, even banks. When called on to provide round-the-clock security for a warehouse and distribution center in Pennsylvania, the firm dispatched an all-woman team, including one lead lieutenant, two shift sergeants and 10 guards. Their arrival created a stir but it died down when they handled the assignment like pros.

Talk to a woman who has pioneered in a formerly all-male field and there are two things she's sure to tell you. One is that a woman has to work harder to prove herself. The other is that when she does, she's accepted. One of Phillips Petroleum's three yardwomen summed it up: "OK, it wasn't easy to begin with but we did it. It's satisfying to know we've taken three small steps for womankind."

Shirt-Tales

PARROTS in bright red take a perch on the blue ground of man-tailored cotton-rayon shirt designed by Eva Shapiro.

FOR THE GOOD SPORT, there's a golfing shirt with easy-action short sleeves. Pair it with slacks, a skirt or with shorts.

EASY TO WEAR, this shirt dress is a smash hit classic in denim blue linen and acrylic. It's hand-washable.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

WHAT's a dazzling blonde charmer from Romania doing on Seventh Avenue? Eva Shapiro says she's having fun and making her fortune. Formerly the designer and directrice of Via Veneto, a house known for its elegant wool and silk costumes, she's onto something new this season. She's joined forces with 23-year-old Robert Turkel in a new sportswear house, Robert Janan Ltd., that's already making a name for itself. The selling points are classic styling at a price — a low one.

For her first line, Eva concentrates on the shirt look.

"The shirt is so well-tailored," she said in her charming accented voice, "that it makes a woman look extra feminine."

In Eva's hands, the shirt is not only a shirt. For several of her super summer styles, it grows to dress length.

America's way of wedding changes little through years, author says

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What's dreamed of for years, planned for months, remembered forever—and over in half an hour?

A wedding.

Eighty per cent of all first marriages in this country are formal, says Marcia Seligson, who attended some 200 ceremonies, formal and otherwise, while gathering material for "The Eternal Bliss Machine," her new book on America's way of wedding.

"The basic thing I learned in my travels is how little has changed," she says. "Most kids want exactly what their parents had. It's as though there were never such things as riots on campus, a sexual revolution, drugs. It's really startling.

"The kids getting married barefoot on the rocks are an infinitesimal number," she adds. "Girls are programmed from the time they are infants to be traditional brides. It's an ingrained part of our culture."

As a result, the bridal industry takes in $7 billion annually from over two million weddings, notes Miss Seligson, who got interested in the subject when she was a bridesmaid six times in one summer.

"I always knew there was something ridiculous about superweddings, but when I found out one of my friends was having her gown 'embalmed' to preserve it, I knew there was something hilarious that was worth investigating," recalls the vivacious young author.

During two years of research she talked to such wedding-oriented entrepreneurs as banquet managers, catereres, florists, band leaders, cake makers, store bridal consultants, ice sculptors, honeymoon resort people, wedding ring manufacturers, apparel designers, people who rent tents and who plank over swimming pools, clergy men of all faiths and ladies who rent dovers. Sometimes she pretended to be a prospective bride and sometimes she admitted to being a reporter.

Among the weddings Miss Seligson attended was a Beverly Hills bash where the mashed potatoes and family poodle were dyed pink to match the bridesmaids' dresses, a Texas affair where the parties went on for so many weeks that the ceremony was an anticlimax, and an underwater wedding where the bride wore a white wet suit covered in soggy lace and the minister had taken scuba diving lessons in order to tie the damp knot.

"I went to one wedding where the couple, all the wedding party, the minister and guests were nude," reports Miss Seligson, who joined them "because I didn't want to stick out like a sore thumb."

She says in today's "new" weddings, usually held outdoors, there's a tremendous involvement in the vows, which the couple often write themselves.

"In traditional weddings the guests are usually more interested in whether the chopped liver will be beef or chicken than in what the kids are saying to each other," she declares.

Some of the credit — or the blame — for the all-out wedding goes to the industry that trumpets the message it's a once-in-a-lifetime thing.

"That implies foreverness. The bridal industry tries to tell you that a formal wedding fosters marriage stability, but that's absolute nonsense," Miss Seligson scoffs.

However, she concedes that everybody must want a wedding or the tradition wouldn't continue and grow.

"Poor people start saving from the day the daughter is born," she says. "The wedding becomes a sort of panacea for all our fears, a status symbol that says we made it bi big and daddy can send his daughter off in materialistic style, America's term for success."

Despite such excesses as a huge ice sculpture of a dolphin with black caviar spewing out of its gullet, Miss Seligson thinks there is a basic need for "rites of passage" when moving from one state in life to another.

"Every civilization in history has had some kind of marriage ceremony," she points out. "I think ritual is a crucial, fundamental human need, but when humanness gets lost then it becomes ridiculous."

Adult counseling provided

VIA program topic at Kiwanis meeting

The Volunteers in Action program was discussed Monday night at the Washington C. H. Kiwanis Club meeting by Mrs. Leroy Davis, a principal developer of the plan.

Mrs. Davis explained that VIA provides adult counseling services to troubled youngsters under the age of 18 who request it.

The concept was developed over a year ago. Through meetings with Fayette County Juvenile Judge Rollo Marchant, former juvenile judge Omar Schwart and probation officer Marshall Boggs, Mrs. Davis discovered there was definitely a need for a volunteer counseling service of some sort.

The present program was initiated in January of this year. Since that time, 15 volunteers have received formal training and now spend anywhere from 15 minutes to two hours per week with the youngsters assigned to them.

VIA especially concerns itself with three groups of children — those who show signs of potential delinquency, those on probation and others who have recently returned from a juvenile institution.

None of the youths are coerced into participation. Only those who desire counseling are referred to a volunteer. Unfortunately, at the present time, there are 10 youngsters who would like to participate, but are unable to find a volunteer.

Mrs. Davis emphasized that it required only a few minutes each week to call or visit a youngster in search of a friend. She urged anyone who is willing to take an interest in Fayette County's youth to contact her at 335-2129.

Many young adults who are "turned off" at home respond to someone who takes an interest in them.

During the business meeting, club president Guy Foster thanked all Kiwanians for their handling of ticket sales at the Fayette County Fair.

Harold Heckaman reminded members of their assignments for the Old Fashioned Bargain Days ice cream social. The club will sponsor the social on the Courthouse lawn beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Congress unlikely to accept auto emission moratorium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is unlikely to accept President Ford's proposal to place a moratorium on tougher antipollution standards for automobiles, congressional sources say.

The legislative draft sent by Ford to Congress on Monday would repeal the emission standards now scheduled to go into effect through 1981, and instead would continue the present standards.

"I don't think that's feasibile or realistic — not if we're going to try to bring about clean air in this nation," said Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chairman of the House subcommittee on health and the environment.

Rogers' subcommittee is now considering legislation that would lessen somewhat the standards for the next two years now set to go into effect under the Clean Air Act of 1970. But those less stringent standards would be tougher than the present ones, which Ford wants continued.

In the Senate, the environmental pollution subcommittee is considering a bill to extend current standards through 1979 for half of an automaker's production but to require the other half to conform to stricter standards.

"The subcommittee has considered a wide range of proposals, including some similar to the one that the President has made, and they are not moving toward such a suspension," said an aide to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

Muskie, the subcommittee chairman, is the main author of the 1970 law. "Sen. Muskie is not in favor of such a suspension," the aide said.

The White House issued a statement explaining Ford's proposal, saying that pollution from automobiles already has been significantly reduced by federal standards applied over the past five years.

The White House statement said Ford's proposal to eliminate any further reduction in auto emission limits through 1981 would "permit a balance among the important objectives of improving air quality, protecting public health and safety, and avoiding unnecessary increases in consumer costs for automobiles, decreases in gasoline mileage, and increases in the nation's dependence on imported oil."

Spokesmen for the nation's automakers supported Ford's proposal, as they did earlier in the year when the President indicated he would recommend continuing present standards.

Sabina woman fined by judge

A Sabina woman was found guilty of contempt of court while a charge of assault filed against a Washington C.H. man was dismissed Monday in Washington C.H. Municipal Court by acting Judge Robert L. Simpson.

Ilene Slone, 20, Sabina, was found guilty of the contempt charge on a previous disposition of a case charging her with passing a bad check at Seaway. Judge Simpson revoked a suspended 10-day sentence on the previous case.

Donald Clickner, 35, of 627 Harrison St., pleaded innocent to a charge of assault, filed on a private warrant, and the case was dismissed with court costs to be paid by the prosecuting witness.

Regents awarded $845,160 grant

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Board of Regents has been awarded a $845,160 federal grant to provide state student incentive grants to an estimated 3,382 students during the 1975-76 academic year.

The funds must be matched by the state, the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said.

Iowa corn crop facing disaster

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Farmers in Iowa need a good, soaking rain within a few days or they will risk losing up to 650 million bushels of corn, state Secretary of Agriculture Robert Lounsberry says.

At current market prices averaging about about $2.85 a bushel for Iowa corn, the potential loss to farmers could be in excess of $1.8 billion.

"If it doesn't come this week, we'll be hurt more than we'd like to admit," Lounsberry said Monday. "The drought conditions might cut yield 30 to 50 bushels per acre."

Iowa produces about 20 per cent of the nation's corn crop and in a good year will harvest more than 1.2 billion bushels. The forecast for this year had been 109 bushels an acre.

The National Corn Growers Association says it is surveying the crop nationwide and it will be next week before it knows the situation elsewhere. Lounsberry says the weather has been good in Indiana and Illinois, which follow Iowa in corn production.

Until now, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated that U.S. farmers will produce a record wheat and corn crop this year that will meet domestic and export demands without seriously affecting American consumer prices.

The National Weather Service forecasts mostly sunny and hot weather for Iowa the next few days, with temperatures expected to top 100 degrees today.

Iowa's corn and soybeans crops are suffering from a combination of excessive heat and insufficient moisture, the Iowa Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday.

"To recover, we would have to have a good inch of rain spread out over a 12 to 24 hour period," Lounsberry said.

Up to an inch of rain fell in scattered Iowa locations last week, but the varied rainfall brought only temporary relief.

Last year, a combination of early flooding followed by a severe drought and an early frost cut the average yield to 81 bushels an acre.

Lounsberry said the corn crop is now in the critical pollination stage which, without rain soon, could result in the corn "producing cobs with no corn on them."

Trouble for the Iowa corn crop came about a month after heavy rains dealt a serious blow crops in the fertile Red River Valley area of western Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration has issued a preliminary estimate that flooding brought crop damage of $1.5 billion in the two-state area, including carryover damage to 1976 production.

The primary crops affected in the Red River Valley were potatoes, sugar beets, sunflowers, barley, wheat and flax.

Joan Little trial starts

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — A 21-year-old black woman on trial for the murder of a white jailer she says was trying to attack her predicts the prosecution is "going to be out like wolves to get me."

Joan Little made the forecast in talking with reporters during a lunchtime break soon after testimony began in her trial Monday.

Her comments came after a Washington, N.C., police officer testified he found the partially nude body of Clarence Alligood in the Beaufort County jail cell that had been occupied by Miss Little.

Sgt. Jerry Helms, the first prosecution witness, said Alligood's body was naked from the waist down. Helms said the jailer, 62, had an ice pick in his right hand and his trousers in his left hand.

A second Washington policeman, Patrolman Johnny Rose, returns to the stand today as the state continues setting the stage for its contention that Miss Little killed Alligood during an escape.

Helms and Rose differed on some of the details they recounted on the stand. Rose said he made a quick examination of Alligood's body, including an attempt to find a pulse, but did not recall seeing anything in his hand.

Helms testified that he went to the jail about 4 a.m. last Aug. 27 at Rose's request to assist in the booking of a female prisoner. When they arrived at the jail they found the door unlocked, he said.

Rose said that after the discovery of Alligood's body, he released his prisoner, a woman arrested for drunkeness, returned to his patrol car and started searching for Miss Little.

Both officers testified that a pair of men's shoes were on the floor outside the cell. Alligood wore only an undershirt, shirt and socks.

Helms said a pair of eyeglasses and men's undershorts were on the floor beside the cell bunk where Alligood was slumped. He and Rose both testified that they noticed blood on the jailer's forehead.

A medical report released after the slaying indicated Alligood had been stabbed 11 times with an ice pick.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Snidely Foon, the noted TV critic, is at Camp Rerun this summer, taking a course on serious criticism of television. His editor has told him a simple "this show stinks" no longer will do.

While Snidely has been terribly busy with classes called "How to Define the Dance" and "Is Masterpiece Theater a Bore?," he still finds time to write about life at Camp Rerun, located in upstate Manhattan.

He says the camp, established in 1956 with a grant from the Tommy Sands Foundation for the Performing Arts, recently opened a TV museum filled with artifacts of major moments in television.

The museum is run by a group of chuckling retirees who used to tape ho-hos for the laugh machines of many wellknown situation comedies.

"Few make a living from laugh tracks now because their laughter is old," Snidely writes. "This is a shame, but that's 'show biz.'"

He says a major draw at the recently-opened museum is a Nattering Nabob of Negativism, a lifelike machine donated by the three networks by a Mr. S.T. Agnew of Maryland.

"For a quarter, the Nabob will natter for two minutes," Snidely says. "For 50 cents, he won't."

Other treasures from the TV museum include a blown fuse from The Electric Company, a pound of treacle from the Doris Day Show and a searing 1969 political joke from the Smothers Brothers.

Also on display are Gomer Pyle' old liberty card, an ounce of guano from the Batcave, a portable riposte from Firing Line, and, from Route 66, a speeding ticket issued in Thunderbolt, Ga.

Snidely's list of artifacts boggles the mind. It includes a used scowl from Ben Casey, five boogie lessons from American Bandstand and a clear-cut moral issue from Gunsmoke.

From Mission Impossible, there's a rare edition of the only three speaking lines ever assigned Peter Lupas. For war buffs, a special treat: A destroyed Japanese battleship from Victory at Sea.

"The TV museum is a bargain for vacationeers," Snidely said in closing. "You get a three-hour guided tour, lunch and a free picture of Gale Storm. And it only costs $3 to get in.

"There is one drawback, though.

"It costs $4 to get out."

If melted at a uniform rate, the Antarctic icecap would yield about six million cubic miles of water — enough to feed the Mississippi River for 50,000 years, all United States rivers for 17,000 years or all rivers in the world for 750 years.

Reds keep winning, taxing bullpen crew

Nolan pulled in 3rd to set humble record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitching coach Larry Shepard thinks Gary Nolan "may be feeling those two years off." The Cincinnati Reds are feeling it too — you can bet your bullpen.

"That's a beautiful record to hold," said a sarcastic Sparky Anderson. "It's one I don't want."

The Reds defeated the San Francisco Giants 8-4 Monday night, widening their division lead to 13½ games, but set a major league record for futility when their starting pitcher failed to finish for the 44th consecutive game.

"I was praying I wouldn't have to use a relief pitcher," moaned Anderson.

Nolan, who earlier this year won six straight games and appeared ready to restablish himself as one of baseball's top hurlers, found himself in trouble from the start.

When the Giants loaded the bases in the second and third innings, Anderson decided he had seen enough.

Enter Pedro Borbon, who quelled the uprising to record his sixth victory in eight decisions.

Dan Driessen's three-run homer in the first inning and a two-run single by George Foster, who was pinch hitting for Driessen, powered the Reds to their 42nd home victory in 53 games.

Asked what Nolan's problem has been, Anderson referred reporters to Shepard.

"All I watch is if they are hitting the ball," said Anderson. "The pitcher can bounce the ball up there and I don't care as long as he gets the hitters out."

Shepard feels Nolan "may not be throwing enough between starts — and he's lost his rhythm.

"The problem is location. He's throwing harder but his location is poorer. Early this year I said everything was going too good. Now he may be feeling those two years off."

Anderson's insertion of Foster as pinch hitter didn't set well with many of the 28,044 fans. But it paid off.

"I don't feel for nobody," said Anderson, who had warned the Reds at the end of last year that he was through "being Mr. Nice Guy."

"I don't manage that way," said Anderson. "The thing is the ballclub, not the individual. I try to put the best people up at the right time."

Foster responded by stinging his former teammates.

It was his fourth pinch hit in eight attempts this year and he credited his success to former pinch hitting great Smokey Burgess, an ex-Red.

Just when it looked like baseball fans wouldn't have anything to get excited about for the rest of the summer, what with Oakland, Cincinnati and Boston running away with their respective divisions. . . along came Philadelphia.

The Fightin' Phils beat Pittsburgh 5-2 Monday night, their eighth straight victory over the Bucs. The loss left Pittsburgh a respectable 4½ games in front in the National League East, but at least the Phils are close enough to stir some sabre-rattling on both sides.

A pair of young right-handers, Pittsburgh's Bruce Kison and Philadelphia's Larry Christenson, were locked in a 1-1 battle in the eighth when the Phils' broke it open with three runs. Dick Allen's bloop triple down the right field line drove in two runs and Ollie Brown singled for the third one.

Mets 11, Cardinals 7

Felix Millan, who has hit in 21 of his last 22 games, collected two doubles and two singles and drove in three runs for New York.

Braves 5, Dodgers 3

The Braves jumped on Los Angeles reliever Mike Marshall for three runs in the eighth—a two-run single by Biff Pocoroba and an RBI-single by Phil Niekro—to win it.

Padres 2, Astros 0

Dave Freisleben, 5-10, tossed a five-hitter and drove in a run with an infield grounder as San Diego's winning streak and Houston's losing streak both reached five games.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Jose Cardenal's first homer in nearly two months, a tiebreaking two-run shot in the fifth inning, gave Chicago the victory.

Twins 9, Royals 8

Lyman Bostock's basesloaded single with one out in the bottom of the ninth boosted the Twins past Kansas City and handed Whitey Herzog his first loss in five games as manager of the Royals.

A's 12, Rangers 6

Reggie Jackson's 26th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, and Joe Rudi's two RBI helped the A's rout Texas and widen their West Division lead over Kansas City to 10½ games.

White Sox 3, Angels 2

Wilbur Wood recorded his eighth victory in his last 11 decisions, teaming with Rich Gossage to six-hit California.

Youth softball tourney planned

Plans for a youth softball tournament August 8-10 at Eyman Park are in the making.

There will be one tournament for boys and one for girls, and teams should be limited to 12 players, who should be between the ages of 14-17 or attended high school this past year.

Entry fee for the tournament is $25 and individual trophies will be given for first, second and third place finishers. There will also be a trophy for the most home runs.

The Fayette County Softball Association will umpire the tourney and if teams need or want coaches, they will be supplied.

Also the champion boy's team will play the girl's champion in the tourney's final game.

Interested persons should contact Chester or Betty Estep at Eyman Park in the evening or call 335-1985 as soon as possible.

Robinson flub helps Tribe

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rick Waits got into the game only because of a blunder by Manager Frank Robinson, but the rookie Cleveland pitcher wound up with his first major league victory.

The fifth of six Cleveland pitchers, Waits retired Dave Duncan with the bases loaded in the ninth inning Monday night after the Orioles had scored three runs to forge a 5-5 tie.

Charlie Spikes, who earlier had hit a solo homer, rapped a two-run single in the 10th and Waits was credited with the 7-5 victory even though he had to be saved by Fred Beene when the Orioles threatened once more.

Waits, a 23-year-old left-hander who was recalled Saturday from Oklahoma City, was shoved into action when Robinson mistakenly forced veteran Jackie Brown to be removed from the mound.

The Cleveland skipper rushed onto the field after Baltimore scored the tying run in the ninth on a force play, with Tommy Davis just beating a possible game-ending double play by sliding into first base.

Robinson went out to quiet first baseman Rico Carty, who disputed the call. That mission accomplished, Robinson got into unexpected trouble before retreating to the dugout.

"I saw Brown standing there looking dejected," Robinson said, "and by force of habit I went over to perk him up. But when I reached the mound, I knew I had goofed."

Pitching coach Harvey Haddix had already gone to the mound while Davis was at bat and when Robinson got there, Brown had to be lifted because it was the second visit in one inning.

Fancy cars draw Bengals watchers

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP)— Every day the fans show up to watch the Cincinnati Bengals in training.

And between drills, one of the sideshows is walking through the team's parking lot for a look at the stunning automobiles.

The one that steals the show is a 1957 British-made four-door Jaguar sedan, a beautiful gray and silver job bearing New Hampshire license tags.

Sherman White owns the car, figures it sold for $5,000 originally, paid $3,000 for it last winter and estimates to build it now would make the price somewhere around $17,000.

"I'd been looking for a car like it in good condition for a long time," White said, "and my dad saw this one advertised in Maine, went up and looked at it and bought it for me," said the defensive end, who was since paid his father back.

Now he's in the market for a rare Mercedes roadster of the 1940s variety, and would like to get a pre-World War II Packard, preferably a V-12.

Essex Johnson drives a bright red Jensen Healey roadster and his Ohio tags says ESSEX.

Boobie Clark, Bengals running back, has his first name on the plates attached to his gray Continental, while Vern Holland has his nickname "SUKI" on the front of his automobile.

Linebacker Al Beauchamp's white Cadillac has a license plate bearing 58-AB, his number.

Not everyone drives a fancy car to work. There a half-ton pickup owned by wide receiver Chip Myers and defensive back Tommy Casanova has a Cheyenne Blazer which he uses on hunting and fishing trips.

Someone, strolling amidst the ritzy looking cars, spotted a conservative-looking auto.

"I wonder," they asked, "what dude owns that thing?"

Shaw nails down cage league title

Shaw wrapped up the Community Education Basketball League Championship Monday night at Eyman Park by handing Avoset a 50-46 loss.

The loss dropped Avoset to 3-2 and upped Shaw's mark to 5-0.

Jeff Wallace led the winners with 12 baskets while Keith Evans hit 14 and David DeWeese added 13 for Avoset.

In the other scheduled league contest, Mathews forfeited to the Record-Herald.

SHAW (50) — Wallace, 12; Bath, 10; Burbage, 10; Shaeffer, 10; Shaw, 4; Boggs, 3; Shaeper, 1.

AVOSET (46) — Keith Evans, 14; DeWeese; 13; Pollock, 9; Clay, 4; Jackson, 3; Kim Evans, 3.

Team leaders Jimmy Perrill and Steve Grooms presented trophies to Coach Perrill and assistant Dave Kelley on behalf of the team. This was Perrill's third league championship in three years as the head of coach of the Lions' Club sponsored team. The final record for each of the past three years was 13-1.

Four Good Hope players, Perrill, Coil, Boyer and Larry Cline, will be moving up to Babe Ruth League next year.

Bengals to play in 'Hall of Fame' game

Four gridders to be inducted Saturday

CANTON, Ohio — Four new names will be added to the Hall of Immortals as the Pro Football Hall of Fame stages its 13th annual enshrinement ceremonies on Saturday.

The induction rites, set for 2 p.m. on the front steps of the pro grid shrine, highlight an event-filled "Football's Greatest Weekend" festival that for two days focuses the attention of the pro football world on this northeastern Ohio city, the birthplace in 1920 of the National Football League.

Sharing the billing with the induction rites is the annual AFC - NFC Hall of Fame game pitting the Washington Redskins against the Cincinnati Bengals. The game will mark the first appearance in Canton for the Bengals while the Redskins first played here in 1965, defeating the Detroit Lions, 20-3.

Game time is 4 p.m. EDT and the contest will be carried live on ABC-TV's coast-to-coast network as a part of the Wide World of Sports series. Taped highlights of the enshrinement will be shown at halftime on the ABC telecast.

The 1975 class of enshrinees includes Roosevelt Brown, George Connor, Dante Lavelli and Lenny Moore and increases to 85 the number of pro grid greats who have been inducted since the Hall first opened in September, 1963.

Brown joined the 1953 Giants as obscure 27th-round draft choice from Morgan State, where he had been a two-time Black All-America choice. A 6-3, 255-pounder with massive arms and a narrow waist, Brown held the starting right offensive tackle job for 13 years. Blessed with outstanding speed and unusual agility, Rosey became a specialist at keeping the ponderous defensive ends of the NFL away from the New York quarterbacks.

During Brown's career, the Giants won six divisional titles and the NFL crown in 1956. In that championship year, Rosey was named AP's Offensive Lineman of the Year in the NFL. He was an All-NFL choice eight straight years from 1956 through 1963 and he played in nine Pro Bowls during this period.

PAST GRID GREATS — The names and busts of Dante Lavelli, Lenny Moore, Roosevelt Brown and George Conner will be added to the Football Hall of Fame - the home of such grid greats as Lou Groza, Red Grange and Sammy Baugh. The four new members will be inducted Saturday at Canton preceding the annual Hall of Fame game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the Washington Redskins.

Connor joined the Bears as a two-way tackle in 1948 but soon the Bears recognized his possibilities as a big, fast and agile linebacker. It is here that the 6-3, 240-pound Connor made his greatest mark in pro football.

During his eight-year career, he won all NFL acclaim at three different positions — offensive tackle, defensive tackle and linebacker. In 1951 and 1952, he won all-loop honors on both the offensive and defensive platoons. During this period, George played in the first four Pro Bowls.

A product of De LaSalle high school in Chicago, Connor enjoyed an exceptional college career, winning all-American honors three times, once as a Holy Cross freshman in 1943 and then at Notre Dame in 1946 and 1947. The first round draft pick of the New York Giants in 1946, George eventually signed as a rookie with the Bears two years later.

Like his long-time teammate Lou Groza, who was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1974, Lavelli turned pro in 1946 after a brief three-game collegiate career at Ohio State under Paul Brown, the man who was organizing the new Cleveland team in the AAFC.

The Hudson, Ohio, native not only beat out many more experienced candidates but he led the new league in pass receiving in his rookie season with 40 catches for 643 yards. Dante won all-AAFC honors in both his first two seasons and later earned all-NFL accord in 1951 and 1953. He also played in three Pro Bowl games.

A 6-2, 186-pound speedster from Reading, Pa., Moore, after a brilliant college career at Penn State, was drafted No. 1 by the Colts in 1956. He quickly lived up to his rave notices by winning Rookie-of-the-Year acclaim.

Since Moore could both catch passes and run with the ball better than most NFL stars, he became a perfect running mate for passing ace Johnny Unitas during the years the Colts were ruling the pro football world. He earned all-NFL honors five times and appeared in seven Pro Bowls.

For the first five years, Lenny split his time between flanker and running back but he became a full-time halfback in 1961. As a result, he shows impressive career statistics in several categories. His 5174 yards rushing and his 678 points scored rank him among the lifetime Top 20 in both categories.

Ohio House passes 'sunshine' measure

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A bill requiring state and local government bodies to conduct their business at meetings open to the public has cleared the Ohio House 86-7.

The so-called "sunshine law" now returns to the Senate for consideration of House changes.

Rep. Thomas P. Gilmartin, D-57 Youngstown, successfully fended off a series of attempts to change the bill on the House floor Monday night, including one he claimed would have rendered it useless.

Gilmartin objected in particular to the amendment by Minority Leader Charles F. Kurfess, R-83 Perrysburg, to delete language that seeks to nullify any action at an open meeting which had been discussed previously by members of the body taking the action.

Kurfess claimed the language was unworkable and overly restrictive. He denied Gilmartin's charge that the minority leader was trying to "throw a curve" at the sponsors.

Kurfess' amendment was tabled by a vote of 50-42.

The Wood County lawmaker was successful in another substantive amendment that removed political party caucuses from a list of exceptions granted under the bill.

That amendment was adopted by a voice vote, but only after Kurfess explained that party caucuses were not included in the bill's definition of a "public body" and were exempt anyway.

Rep. A. G. Lancione, D-99 Bellaire, offered a successful amendment that deleted the bill's criminal penalties. He said civil remedies provided in the measure, namely removal from office, were "dire enough." The House agreed 75-12.

Other defeated amendments, which garnered only scattered support would have required public agencies, upon request, to permit televising of their proceedings; mandated that public bodies provide written minutes of meetings "at reasonable cost," and said that judges, instead of being empowered to remove a public official from office, could only set a date for a recall election to let the public official's constituents decide the issue.

Exceptions granted under the bill — meetings that may continue to be held in private — include those that deal with pardons and paroles, security arrangements, attorney consultations, sale or purchase of land, labor negotiations, and complaints being heard but not yet substantiated by the state Ethics Commission.

Rhodes on stand at Kent trial

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes was to face claims today he encouraged use of unreasonable force five years ago in dealing with student demonstrators at Kent State University.

Rhodes also is accused of improperly usurping authority of the Ohio Highway Patrol, the Portage County sheriff's office, city police and Kent State police by ordering Ohio National Guardsmen to Kent during a weekend of rioting.

He was to take the witness stand in the $46 million damages trial stemming from the 1970 Kent State shootings.

The shooting victims charge that the governor encouraged use of unreasonable force in dealing with demonstrators by "the sound and fury" of his remarks at a news conference the day before the shootings.

Also on today's witness list was Michael W. Delaney, a former guard public relations man. Delaney said in a pretrial statement the governor pledged at the news conference to "use all necessary force" to keep the peace in Kent.

Rhodes was expected to testify that nothing he said was to be taken as instructions to law enforcement officials.

Lawyers for nine students wounded and parents of four students killed in the May 4, 1970, incident claim Rhodes was trying to portray himself as a law and order candidate near the close of a losing campaign for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination.

Rhodes is one of 41 present or former state officials and guardsmen who are defendants.

The governor's appearance was taken as a signal that the victims had nearly concluded presenting their case. The way was cleared for Rhodes' testimony after attorneys finished examining the senor Guard officer on campus the day of the shooting and the university president at the time.

Ohio woman sues Exxon

NEW YORK (AP) — An Ohio woman has sued officials of Exxon Corp., charging that over a decade they used $59 million of the giant oil firm's money to bribe Italian politicians.

In her stockholder's complaint, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Joan Levine Gall of Cincinnati named Exxon board chairman J.K. Jamieson and president C.C. Garvin Jr. as defendants.

She alleged that "the $59 million was used as bribes and waste of corporate assets to secure special political favors as well as other illegal commitments and was improperly contributed to Italian political parties and others from 1963 to 1974.

"Dummy invoices and unsupported cash payment requests were amongst the methods used to conceal the contributions."

The plaintiff, executrix of the estate of her father, Nathan Levine, asked unspecified damages allegedly suffered by Exxon, and reimbursement to the corporation from the directors.

The company had no comment.

JAMES MORRIS IN TREIGLE'S ROLE

CINCINNATI (AP) — James Morris, Metropolitan Opera basso, will sing Mephistopheles in the Cincinnati Opera's new production of "Faust," which opens the season June 18.

In planning the new production, which is sponsored by the Corbett Foundation, the late Norman Treigle was cast as the devil. The production is slated for three opera companies, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Houston.

They have all settled on American James Morris who, in January, was scheduled to sing the Commendatore in "Don Giovanni" at the Met and stepped in at the last moment to sing the title role, very successfully.

Morris, who never has sung Mephistopheles, will sing it in September in Philadelphia when the Lyric and Grand Opera companies merge and will open the Houston season Nov. 21.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Complete Physical Before Marriage

When I was 18 I was infected with gonorrhea. I was treated and told that I was cured.

Now, at 28 I'm seriously thinking about marriage. Can I still transmit this disease to my future wife?

Mr. J. W., Ken.

Dear Mr. W.:

Your sense of responsibility is admirable. Unfortunately, there are far too many young people who, having acquired a venereal disease, do not seek treatment. Consequently, they spread their disease to others.

Since you were effectively treated for your gonorrheal infection, there is little reason to suspect that any remnants of it remain.

Nevertheless, an examination with smears and cultures should be done to give you the added assurance you seek.

A premarital blood test for syphilis does not indicate the absence or presence of gonorrhea. It is for this reason that a complete physical examination by the physician is one of the great gifts that a young couple can give to each other before marriage.

There is no substitute for this. Yet, far too many people impose on their doctor the phrase, "Just sign this" as a substitute for a thorough examination.

My doctor refused to take a cinder out of my eye. He sent me to a specialist who took a fraction of a second to remove it. I felt annoyed when I had to pay his fee.

Mr. T. G., Ohio

Dear Mr. G.:

You really have no justification for your annoyance. In fact, your reaction should be one of gratitude to your doctor who had the good judgment to know his limitations in such a matter.

The cinder may have been embedded in a highly sensitive part of the eye requiring special care.

Referring you to a specialist was entirely correct. It is a testimonial to his expert ability that it took only a "fraction of a second" to remove the cinder.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

Bridge is much more a question of how many or how few mistakes you make rather than how frequently you make brilliant bids or plays.

Oddly enough, the most common errors are due to the tendency of players to follow general rules blindly — instead of branching out on their own when the situation calls for it.

Consider this deal where West was faced with the problem of what to lead after cashing the A-K-Q of clubs. Actually, he led a spade, hoping to find his partner with the king, and declarer easily made the contract.

But this was not a very good play for West to make. He should have realized that not only was South highly likely to have the king of spades for his opening bid, but that even if East had the king there was nothing to be gained by leading a spade at this point.

Instead, West should have played the four of clubs at trick four! This would have cut declarer down to size after East ruffed with the ten and made West's jack the setting trick.

West should reason that not only is there a reasonable chance of finding partner with a high trump — in which case the fourth club lead will beat the contract — but that nothing will be lost if East does not have a high trump to ruff with.

It must be granted that a defender seldom makes a play of the type recommended here — because most of us have been indoctrinated with the precept that you never give declarer a ruff and discard.

However, this is not really a ruff-discard situation where declarer can gain a trick by the club lead, and it therefore behooves West to fire a club at declarer at trick four because it offers by far the best chance of stopping the contract.

FBI phone book deep, dark secret

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the FBI's best-kept secrets is its telephone directory.

Hardly anyone outside the FBI has one and not even the attorney general has one, although his aides say he doesn't really need it.

Reporters and other private citizens cannot get one, not even by petitioning for it under the Freedom of Information Act which is supposed to, and sometimes does, open all sorts of government files to public view.

This reporter tried that route but only gained one page of the directory after Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi overruled the FBI. That page lists the numbers for FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley's office and for the offices of 10 of the 13 FBI divisions. The phone numbers for Kelley and all 13 divisions long have been listed in the Justice Department directory which is routinely provided to reporters.

The page that Levi released also includes the numbers for the FBI gymnasium, the guard captain, and the cafeteria. A reporter might cover the FBI for 30 years and never need those numbers.

Reporters who occasionally have glimpsed one of the secret directories believe it contains an alphabetical list of the thousands of headquarters employes, their division assignment, room numbers and telephone numbers.

Levi and Kelley argued that a reporter doesn't need a phone book because the main switchboard operator will put through calls to any FBI employe. That sometimes works and sometimes doesn't.

This exercise began last Feb. 21, in an effort to obtain a necessary tool of reporting. On March 14, Kelley denied the request, citing the sections of the FOI Act exempting certain internal records and personnel files from public disclosure. And he wrote in a letter:

"I am aware that the information you requested would be vital to certain foreign intelligence services intent upon disrupting or otherwise thwarting our activities. I am therefore concerned that public disclosure of this information could impede our ability to carry out our investigative responsibilities."

Besides, he said, reporters already have the names and telephone numbers for the agents designated to respond to press inquiries. The spokesman deliver only the agency's official response and they often don't have the requested data or take hours or days to provide it.

Kelley's decision was appealed to Levi who replied on July 17, "I have decided to affirm the action of Director Kelley in this case with a single modification" — the page he ordered released.

"Failure to have access to this directory affects the public not at all," Levi wrote. He said the FBI switchboard will connect any caller with the individual he requests or with "the appropriate office to deal with the caller's problem."

The attorney general said he was acting to protect the privacy of FBI employes.

In Focus

by Charlie Pensyl

It's rare that we get through a class session at CKFN without saying something about slide spotting but we still haven't gotten through to some people. You see, when those slides come back from the processing lab they're not ready to project yet — not 'til they're spotted. Now if you are the only person that will ever handle that slide the spotting is not quite so important, however it is most helpful. But whenever someone else must project that slide it must, I mean must, be spotted. That's the only way the projectionist knows how to orient the thing in the projector to make it come out right on the screen. The spot should be placed in the lower left corner of the slide as you look at it the way the scene looked when you shot it. Then, you see, if you place your thumb over the spot and place it in the projector (assuming you're right-handed) the slide will be up-side-down and the projected image will be right-side-up on the screen. Follow all that?

Speaking of slide orientation, you wouldn't believe how many people with a 35 mm camera always take pictures with the camera held horizontally the way it was on the shelf in the camera shop. It hasn't sunk in that that camera can be turned to shoot a vertical. You wouldn't believe how many people photograph a person standing with a horizontal format. Why? It don't make sense to me. The pros shoot mostly verticals, that is unless they're doing 'scapes, but most beginners seem to forget that the camera can be turned to vertical.

Murder trial scheduled

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Jury selection was set to begin Tuesday in the murder trial of Robert Paul Sander, accused of shooting five persons to death March 2 at a Smith River restaurant in Del Norte County.

Sander, 24, a former department store employe in Cincinnati, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Del Norte County Superior Court Judge Frank S. Petersen, who transferred the trial to Shasta County because of pretrial publicity, said Sander was to be examined by three psychiatrists before the trial begins.

Petersen said approximately 30 witnesses may be called in a trial that could last two weeks.

The judge said he has advised attorneys not to discuss the case to avoid cause for a second change of venue.

Chenault trial won't be moved

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The trial of Cincinnati Vice Mayor William Chenault, who faces charges of impropriety in office, will likely not be moved out of Hamilton County after all, according to Chenault's attorney.

Attorney Gene Mesh said Monday that he is no longer considering a change of venue.

Mesh said however that he will move today for separate trials on the six counts because the case involves "too much for the jurors to sort out."

Chenault is charged with four counts of falsification of official record, and single counts of theft in office and embezzlement.

The trial is set to start August 18.

Long fears all controls will expire

Congress ponders energy plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Senate tax specialists work out a formula for rebating any windfall oil-company profits to consumers, House parliamentarians are debating whether to send President Ford's latest oil price plan to the floor for a vote.

The House Rules Committee, which controls the flow of legislation to the floor, may decide today whether to clear the way for a House vote on a resolution rejecting Ford's revised oil price plan. The panel is to hear testimony from Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb.

Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, told the Rules Committee on Monday that the full House should have a chance to vote on Ford's plan as quickly as possible.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Commerce subcommittee on energy, also urged sending the Ford plan to the floor but said steps should be taken to allow a floor vote on whether virtually all of Ford's price decontrol plan should be combined with some Democratic proposal for a windfall profits tax.

Such a strategy would be "the best way out of the thicket into which we've wandered," Dingell said.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee today was taking up proposals to return windfall oil company profits to consumers in the event oil price controls expire Aug. 31.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the panel, assumes that Ford and Congress will be unable to resolve their differences over energy policy this week and, therefore, that price controls will expire in five weeks, when Congress is on vacation.

It is widely anticipated that such a sudden expiration would quickly boost prices for gasoline and other petroleum products, and congressional tax experts estimate the oil industry would gain $18 billion in unexpected profits.

Long's committee voted Monday in favor of a windfall profits tax that would collect 90 per cent of oil company profits accruing as a result of the removal of price controls. However, the companies would be allowed to avoid a portion of the tax by reinvesting a greater share of the windfall in the search for more oil and gas.

Committee experts said the tax would collect enough over its six-year life to finance a rebate of $361.29 for every U.S. citizen 16 years and older, regardless of whether the citizen drove autos.

The resolution before the House Rules Committee would reject Ford's latest oil price plan which was sent to Congress last Friday. Under the law, that law automatically goes into effect unless either the House or the Senate votes by a majority to reject it five working days after the President submits it. That deadline is Friday.

IT'S WORTH GETTING EIGHT? — While one may think that Washington C. H. has an avid Record-Herald reader, this picture was actually taken at the entrance to the Heritage Way Apartments on Heritage Way. However, there could be several advantages to subscribing for eight newspapers. . .besides all the grocery coupons, one would have eight chances to read Dear Abby and could see their name in print eight times if it should appear in the paper that day.

Jobless pay changes eyed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State senators were to turn their attention to unemployment compensation today after completing passage Monday night of a bill establishing a college of osteopathic medicine at Ohio University.

The House, also back from weekend recess, added its approval to a Senate measure that seeks to give Ohio a "sunshine law," requiring state and local government agencies to conduct their business in public.

Legislative leaders called for action on several other fronts in their attempt to end summer working sessions Friday. They said members could be called back around Labor Day to consider possible vetoes and complete other routine business.

The unemployment compensation measure, which emerged Monday from the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee, would make major revisions in the existing law and provide substantial increases in maximum payments.

Under the bill, yet to be considered by the House, maximum weekly benefits would range from $95 a week for a claimant with no dependents to $150 for one with three or more dependents. The bill provides generally that an unemployed worker would get 50 per cent of his average weekly wage, not to exceed the prescribed maximums.

Also pending in the Senate is another major bill that hikes Workmen's Compensation benefits. Already approved by the House, it is expected to be acted upon today by the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee, clearing the way for floor action.

Sen. Neil F. Zimmers Jr., D-5 Dayton, won 24-6 approval of the bill that will give Ohio its first and only school of osteopathic medicine on the Athens campus. Opponents argued generally that the southeastern Ohio location was wrong because it lacks clinical facilities where graduates could serve residencies.

Sen. Donald J. Pease, D-13 Oberlin, an Ohio University graduate, offered an unsuccessful amendment that would have established a department of osteopathic medicine at Wright State University near Dayton, where a general medical college is being built.

Pease stressed that while he wants to help his alma mater "any way I can, I just feel that this is not the time and place."

He said the new facility will cost taxpayers up to $40 million within the next 10 years, while use of existing management and support facilities at Dayton would cut the bill sharply.

Pease's amendment was voted down 23-7.

House members voted 86-7 to require open meetings of government agencies, but removed from the bill a provision that set criminal penalties for public officials convicted of violating its terms. Remaining in the legislation is authority for a judge to remove from office those officials violating an injunction prohibiting closed meetings.

The bill contains a list of exceptions for certain types of meetings, such as parole hearings, consultations with an attorney, sale or purchase of land, labor negotiations, the planning of security arrangements, and complaint hearings of the state Ethics Commission.

Rep. Charles F. Kurfess, R-83 Perrysburg, won approval of a floor amendment that removed political party caucuses from the list of exceptions.

He said it was to improve the bill's language and "not to open up political causues." He explained that in the definition section, the bill defines and limits itself to cover public bodies only.

"A political party caucus is not a public body under the language in the bill," he said.

Ford pays tribute to dead in Nazi concentration camp

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — His head bowed in silent prayer, President Ford placed a wreath today at an international monument marking the site of Nazi Germany's Auschwitz gas chambers where millions died in World War II.

Accompanied by Polish Communist party leader Edward Gierek, Ford flew from Krakow airport to the Auschwitz camp by helicopter for the brief ceremony that preceded a presidential speech in Krakow's market square.

Thousands of people from this part of Poland that produced many Polish-Americans streamed into the Old Square from all directions to see the second U.S. president to visit this country. Former President Richard M. Nixon visited Poland in 1972.

Ford's 27-hour visit to Poland was long on ceremonies, short on substance. It did produce a joint statement in which Ford and Polish Communist chief Edward Gierek expressed a "will to achieve progress" in stalled Vienna negotiations aimed at mutual arms reductions in central Europe.

This was considered somewhat significant in that the Communist bloc countries have downplayed the Vienna talks while pushing hard for a non-binding European security agreement that will be signed in Helsinki this week by Ford, Gierek, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and leaders of 32 other governments in Europe and North America.

Richard Davies, U.S. ambassador to Poland, readily acknowledged to newsmen that, during the Ford visit, "there wasn't an opportunity to break new ground." He attributed this to the successful negotiation of a series of agreements already worked out and announced during a Ford-Gierek meeting in Washington last October.

Mrs. Ford was among the missing during most of the President's ceremonial activities Monday in Warsaw. Her press secretary said the First Lady skipped three events because she was very tired and suffering from "jet lag." She had breast cancer surgery last fall.

Later Monday, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the First Lady was "looking fine and rested" and ready to resume the strenuous 10-day, five-nation tour that began last weekend in West Germany. Nessen said Mrs. Ford had not been ill.

Turk action hurts U.S. spying

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government specialists say the Turkish takeover of key U.S. electronic intelligence-gathering stations has cost the United States about 25 per cent of its ability to monitor Soviet missile launches.

They say this is the most serious loss to the United States as a result of Turkey moving in on U.S. bases in retaliation for the House's refusal to lift an arms embargo against the Turks.

These officials warn that the already sticky problem of atomic test verification being debated by U.S. and Soviet diplomats shaping a new nuclear arms limitation agreement would be made even more difficult without the ground stations operating from Turkey.

White House and State Department officials are reported working behind the scenes for a reversal of the House decision, which came on a close 223-206 vote last Thursday. President Ford sent House Speaker Carl Albert a letter Monday, saying: "My responsibility for the national security and conduct of foreign affairs have led me to urge in the strongest terms that the House lift the embargo." The Senate already has approved an end to the embargo.

In the view of Pentagon officials, the most important of some two dozen U.S. installations in Turkey are four stations that beam radar and other sensitive electronic sensors into the Soviet Union.

These stations intercept Soviet communications traffic which keeps the United States informed about Russian military movements, track Soviet satellites and monitor test and training launches of missiles from bases in central Russia.

The electronic devices enable the United States to keep constantly abreast of Russian progress in developing advanced weapons.

The United States observes much of what Russia does from satellites which pass over the Soviet Union equipped with sophisticated cameras, infrared sensors, and other instruments.

But there are gaps between the times when these satellies are over Russian territory as they travel in globe-circling orbits. That is why U.S. intelligence experts consider very vital the round-the-clock, fulltime coverage provided by the powerful ground stations within range of the Soviet Union.

Malpractice bill okayed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — All Ohio doctors and hospitals are guaranteed malpractice insurance coverage under a new state law signed Monday night by Gov. James A. Rhodes.

The legislation, which takes effect immediately, established a Joint Underwriters Association to provide coverage to physicians in "high risk" specialties and others unable to acquire protection through private firms.

The new law also sets a $200,000 limit on the amount a victim can recover for pain and suffering damages through legal proceedings. No limit was set on total legal recovery.

"I believe Ohio has taken the important first step in solving the medical malpractice crisis...," Rhodes said. "The legislation represents a fair compromise for all parties involved in the malpractice problem, including doctors, lawyers, patients, legislators and representatives of the insurance industry."

In fact, considerable compromise was necessary to fashion a bill acceptable to interest groups which lobbied heavily on both sides of the issue.

The Ohio State Bar Association dropped opposition to the plan last week after a joint conference committee removed a section that would have limited contingency fees often collected by lawyers representing victims.

By county commissioners

Mental health levy approved for ballot

The Fayette County Board of Commissioners approved a resolution Monday to certify an additional .50-mill operating levy by the Fayette County Board of Mental Retardation on the November general election ballot.

The commission received the request by Carl Whitaker, administrator of the Fayette Progressive School for the mentally handicapped, who cited increased operational costs and enrollment necessitating additional funding for the school, located in the former Sunnyside Elementary School building on S. Fayette Street.

Whitaker said the .50-mill additional tax levy would be retired in 1986. An additional .65-mill operating levy sought for the school was soundly defeated by Fayette County voters during the 1974 November general election.

The school is presently operating on a .35-mill levy. The operating levy will expire at the end of next year.

In other business, the commissioners granted a request by Fayette County engineer Charles P. Wagner to resurface two county roads, at an estimated $50,000 total cost, and authorized Wagner to begin advertising for bids for the road construction materials.

The roads to be resurfaced include Robinson Road for 2.74 miles from White Road to Camp Grove Road, at an estimated $35,399.80, and Bogus Road from Robinson Road to U.S. 35 for 1.041 miles at a proposed cost of $11,301.80.

Wagner also presented the engineer's profiles and maps on the joint-county Ellis ditch project. Wagner told the

Obscure measure holds pay boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — It might not be apparent from reading the title of the measure, but the Senate is considering a bill to increase the salaries of Congress and other top federal officials.

The bill is listed on the Senate's legislative calendar as an act to amend Title 39, United States Code, to apply to the Postal Service certain provisions of law providing for federal agency safety programs and responsibilities and for other purposes.

In an unannounced action on Friday, the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee added the pay raise section to a House-passed bill to require the Postal Service to comply with the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The new section would give salary increases to Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, Cabinet members, top-level executive officials, federal judges and members of Congress.

The amount of the increases would depend on how much of a cost-of-living adjustment President Ford recommends for government employes in general. For example, a 5 per cent increase would boost the annual pay of a member of Congress from $42,500 to $44,625.

The Senate opened debate on the bill Monday night. The legislation was defended as simple justice and denounced as a backdoor attempt to insulate Congress from the effects of inflation.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., the Post Office committee chairman, said the raises are needed to attract talented people to government jobs. He said the number of people involved represent only 1 per cent of the federal payroll.

Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, the committee's ranking Republican, spoke of "hardpressed federal officials in the upper echelon" who he said have "suffered long enough from congressional inaction."

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., announced he wil offer an amendment to exclude members of Congress from the pay increase provision. If Congress members were excluded, "I think you will see enthusiasm for the bill greatly dampened," he said.

Allen and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind-Va., complained that the pay raise was buried in a bill having nothing to do with pay raises, and Allen said members of Congress traditionally have sought to avoid a vote squarely on the issue of whether their own salary should be raised.

Sale of missiles to Jordan deferred

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with congressional opposition, the Ford administration has deferred its proposed sale of 14 Hawk missile batteries to Jordan.

A number of legislators have criticized the proposed sale on the grounds the number of batteries is excessive and would tip the balance of power in the Middle East.

The Ford administration's deferral of its request for congressional approval, announced Monday, takes pressure off Congress which has 20 days in which it can veto proposed military sales to foreign governments. The period would have run out Wednesday, shortly before the legislators are set to begin an August recess.

A critic of the sale, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said he hopes the administration will use the extra time to go back to Jordan's King Hussein to make sure he is "taking into account the views of the committee regarding the 14 batteries."

There were conflicting accounts of whether the deferral meant the administration is ready to scale down the $350-million proposal, which already has been voted down by the House International Relations Committee.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the deferral came because his panel and the House committee had developed "overwhelming evidence" that the proposed sale is excessive.

"I hope that any new notice sent to the Congress after the August recess will reflect what I see as the overwhelming concern in Congress that the proposed sale to Jordan was larger than her requirements for purely defensive purposes," Case said. He also said the deferral "leaves the door open for a possible compromise."

But State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said the deferral was only a chance "for resubmitting the notification (of the sale) within a time framework which would permit Congress to deal with the issue." He said, "There is no change" in the numbers of missiles proposed.

The formal withdrawal came in a letter from Robert S. Ingersoll, acting secretary of state, who said the administration is prepared to extend the legal 20-day period as much as three times by withdrawing and then resubmitting its formal sales proposal.

Rail reorganization response is mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-awaited government reorganization plan for ailing Northeast railroads has won a mixed reaction in Congress but also pledges that action will be taken on the problem promptly.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate Transportation subcommittee handling the problem, said the federal planners who announced the plan Monday were to be commended for their work.

But he said some changes in the plan clearly were needed. His panel already has conducted hearings on parts of the plan and will complete these soon after Congress returns from its August recess.

The Indiana Senator said his panel then will draft legislation to implement the plan, embodying some of its own ideas.

Hartke said he was confident Congress could enact the legislation this year.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., senior Republican on the subcommittee, was not enthusiastic about the proposal. He called it "A mishmash which does not go nearly far enough."

After the outlines of the plan became known earlier in the year, many members of Congress criticized it for proposing to eliminate thousands of miles of track.

Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., repeated such criticism Monday. He said such a large abandonment would cost many jobs, and urged that there be a two-year moratorium on any such withdrawals.

The plan would consolidate seven railroads into a 15,000-mile system to be known as ConRail, stretching from the Atlantic to the Mississippi River. Backbone of the system would be the bankrupt Penn Central.

Also covered by the plan are the Erie Lackawanna, the Reading, the Central of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley, and Lehigh and Hudson River, and the Ann Arbor.

The U.S. Railway Association said the reoganization would be the largest corporate reorganization in American history.

Space fumes caused by crew slipup

HONOLULU (AP) — A slipup by the Apollo astronauts caused poisonous rocket fumes to flow into their cabin as they headed for a Pacific Ocean splashdown ending a joint U.S.-Soviet space flight, space agency officials say.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials declined to call it pilot error.

They said the U.S. spacemen may have failed to throw two necessary switches because an electronic squeal disrupted communications in the Apollo. The two switches were to start an automatic landing system.

The official account of the incident was released Monday as Thomas P. Stafford, Donald K. Slayton and Vance D. Brand prepared to end a four-day hospitalization. They were being taken to secluded quarters today to begin 10 days in isolation.

The astronauts are to continue tape recording their accounts of the mission during their isolation. The seclusion was ordered because their gas-inflamed lungs are vulnerable to infection.

Dr. Glynn S. Lunney, technical director of the Apollo-Soyuz mission which ended last Thursday, said precise details of what caused the gas leak are still unclear.

A lapse in communication apparently occurred between Slayton, who was calling off checklist items, and Brand, who was to have switched the automatic system on.

Failure to throw the switches as the Apollo command module was dropping toward an ocean splashdown meant that small steering rocket motors were not shut off.

One of the motors was located on the outside of the module.

Violence reported in West Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Sporadic incidents of violence plagued a small section of west Detroit early today following a night of skirmishing between police hurling tear-gas and angry black youths responding with rocks.

A police spokesman termed the situation in the LivernoisFenkell area of the city as "pretty stable" but said there were some incidents of looting outside the area where hundreds of young blacks roamed beginning about 8 p.m. Monday.

Police said the incident was touched off when a white bar owner shot a young black. Police said the bar owner, Andrew Chinarian, 39, told them he shot the man when he found him tampering wih Chinarian's car. Chinarian, who was not charged, turned himself in and was released to his own custody, police said. He was to report for further questioning today.

Obie Wynn, 18, of Detroit was taken to Mount Carmel Mercy Hospital with gunshot wounds. Police said he was in critical condition.

Shortly after the shooting, crowds gathered near the bar and youths ocasionally tossed Molotov cocktails.

Officer Don Nash said that between 500 and 700 policemen were called to the four-squareblock area in the run-down section of the city. Many wore riot gear and carried carbines.

On one block, half-a-dozen blacks stood guard inside a black-owned discount store, cradling small semi-automatic weapons.

Small groups of youths were reported still in the debris-littered skirmish area early today.

Police said a total of 36 persons were arrested, most for malicious destruction of property.

A policeman was hospitalized after being hit in the forehead with a brick. Several police cars were set fire, one burning to the pavement while about 100 persons stood and cheered. Several empty stores were set ablaze, and firemen were hampered by rock-throwing crowds.

Borden reports earnings rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Borden, Inc. reported a record 6.1 per cent increase in second quarter income today, company officials announced.

Augustine R. Marusi, chairman and chief executive officer, said net income for the three months ended June 30 totaled $26.4 million, compared to $24.9 million a year ago.

Primary earnings per share were 86 cents during the quarter compared to 81 cents in 1974. Second quarter sales were $876.6 million, a 4.4 per cent gain from $839.6 million last year.

First half sales totaled $1.67 billion, an increase of 8.2 per cent.

Economic indicators show improvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's index of leading business indicators rose 1.9 per cent in June, pointing to an improved economy in months ahead, the Commerce Department said today. It was the fourth consecutive month the indicators have pointed to improvement.

The department also reported a record trade surplus during the second quarter of the year of $3.5 billion and a record surplus in the first half of 1975 of nearly $5.5 billion.

Imports of petroleum and petroleum products were reported down to an average of just under 5.7 million barrels a day in the second quarter of the year, compared with an average of slightly more than 6.2 million barrels a day in the first quarter. Cost of oil imports was listed at $5.9 billion, down from $6.5 billion in the first quarter.

The Commerce Department said eight of the nine categories in its index of leading indicators increased in June. This was led by an improvement in total liquid assets of financial institutions. Also increasing were average work week, sales deliveries, changes in prices of a select category of goods, stock prices, the money supply, new orders from business and building permits.

The only indicator that fell was contracts and orders for plant and equipment.

The increase of 1.9 per cent in the indicators put the index at 98.3 per cent of the 1967 average of 100, the highest since last October when it was 103.

The index had increased 2.2 per cent in May and 3.4 per cent in April.

The Commerce Department recently revised the indicators index to provide what it feels is a more accurate measure of business trends in the economy. But it is also reporting the old index, and this declined 1.4 per cent in June, the first drop since it was replaced.

It is possible to make meaningful comparisons between the new index and business indicators of past years since the Commerce Department revised past indices to reflect the new system of economic measurement.

The Commerce Department report on second quarter trade follows by a day its report on Monday that the nation had a trade surplus in June of $1.7 billion, which was a record.

The quarterly trade report was on a balance-of-payments basis, meaning it excludes military trade of U.S. defense agencies and other adjustments that are included in the monthly trade reports.

The Commerce Department said the trade improvement resulted from a larger reduction in imports than in exports, with imports declining $3 billion, to a total $22.3 billion while exports declined $1.4 billion to a total of $25.8 billion.

It said the changes were due primarily to steep reductions in imports of petroleum and other industrial supplies, and in exports of agricultural commodities, which declined 22 per cent to $4.9 billion in the second quarter.

Report coup in Nigeria

PARIS (AP) — Gen. Yakubu Gowon, military ruler of oilrich Nigeria, the world's largest black nation, has been overthrown in a bloodless coup, according to broadcasts from the West African nation.

In Kampala, the Ugandan capital, 40-year-old Gowon left a session of the Organization of African Unity summit meeting and returned to his hotel room. The summit meeting was suspended.

Gowon was calm and smiling, but evidently had seen news dispatches from Lagos, capital of the nation of 60 million people.

Unofficial sources said Gowon had no direct information from Lagos.

Summery weather covers U.S.

By the Associated Press

Most of the country was treated to typically warm cloudless midsummer weather today, with only a few showers predicted for Southern areas and thunderstorms in parts of the West.

Skies were clear from the northern half of the Great Plains eastward through the Mississippi Valley and into the northern Appalachians. California and most of Texas also had sunny skies.

Mild temperatures and widely scattered afternoon showers and thunderstorms were forecast for the Intermountain and Rocky Mountain regions into the western portion of the Great Plains. The Northern Plains were expected to have temperatures in the 80s.

Scattered showers and thundershowers were likely over the South Atlantic Coast states west through the Gulf Coast states into eastern Texas and north into Kentucky, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

It was expected to be hot in the northern and central Great Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.

A cold front brought cloudy skies to the Pacific Northwest, where light rain fell overnight.

Rain also fell overnight from New England south through the Appalachians. It also stretched along the Gulf coast to Eastern Texas and north into southern parts of Kansas and Missouri.

Predawn temperatures ranged from from 46 at Evanston, Wyo., to 92 at Phoenix, Ariz.

Dionne Warwicke sues songwriters

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Dionne Warwicke has filed a $5.5 million suit against songwriters Burt Bacharach and Hal David, alleging breach of contract.

The suit filed Monday in Superior Court said the songwriters had failed to keep a 1971 agreement to produce one album a year for four years with the singer. It said that the songs on her first album had been written by the pair but that despite several extensions, they had not writen the songs used for her second and third albums.

The suit, which asked $5 million in punitive damages and $500,000 in compensatory damages, claimed Miss Warwicke's career suffered as a result of the songwriters' failure to compose for her.

A spokesmen for Bacharach said he would have no comment. David was not immediately available for comment.

Congress overrides health bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress today overrode President Ford's veto of a $2 billion health bill, the first time in five tries this session that the House mustered enough votes to enact into law a measure that Ford rejected.

The vote was 348 to 43, or 99 votes more than the two-thirds majority necessary to override.

The Senate met in a rare weekend session Saturday to override Ford's veto 67 to 15.

In his veto message, Ford called the health package excessively costly and said some program duplicated existing health efforts.

Investigator denies licensing convict

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An investigator under fire in the relicensing of an escaped mental patient says he never was assigned to the case.

Fred Davis of the Medical Registration and Examination Board said Monday, "I can't be guilty of negligence because I was never assigned to the case."

He also accused two aides to Gov. Otis R. Bowen of not doing a very thorough job of investigating before saying he and Joseph D. O'Brien were to blame.

O'Brien, board administrator, and Davis were recommended for disciplinary action after Robert Hales was hired as a prison doctor. Hales, a former physician, was convicted as a criminal sexual psychopath.

Safeguarding the Redwoods

Sometimes it seems that the courts take too much upon themselves. Then again it is good to see the courts ride herd on the government in the common interest. As, for example, when a federal judge ordered the Interior Department to do more about protecting the ecology of Redwood National Park in California.

The Sierra Club has charged that Interior was neglectful in safeguarding the forest from erosion and other bad effects of lumbering operations. The court agreed. It is a victory for all who want as much as possible of our natural heritage preserved for the enjoyment of this and future generations.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . . By John P. Roche

Keeping the tabbies tame

There aren't many laughs in politics these days, but on July 10th President For interrupted the seemingly endless wake for the Central Intelligence Agency with a bit of stand-up humor worthy of Groucho Marx. He solemnly summoned to the White House the chairmen of the many Federal regulatory agencies and told them to lay off. To be precise, he called for a "maximum freedom for private enterprise" and chided the agencies (such as the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Communications Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission) for allegedly harassing businessmen.

Anyone who knows anything about the activities of these so-called independent regulatory agencies immediately appreciated that the President was in effect telling a bunch of toothless tabbies to stop being tigers. With few exceptions these agencies have long since been bagged up by the business interests they are supposed to regulate. Occasionally there will be an internal feud: the Interstate Commerce Commission, long a fiefdom of the railroads, faced in recent years a take-over bid by the truckers. And there have been various brawls in the Federal Communications Commission over the application of the "fairness doctrine," but Walter Cronkite put reality in a nutshell when he said of the networks, "We're big and we're powerful enough to thumb our nose at threats from the government, and I hope it stays that way."

The history of these agencies is interesting. Around the turn of the century there was a great outcry against corruption. What know they of corruption who only Watergate know? By current standards the situation was unbelievable. Henry Demerest Lloyd, one of the leading "muckrakes" (as Theodore Roosevelt, in a moment of anger, denoted the reformers) observed accurately that the only thing that Standard Oil could not do with the Pennsylvania legislature was refine it! The so-called "Robber Barons" were not without charm — one of them observed after a particularly ingenious raid upon the public interest that "nothing was lost but honor."

The thrust of the reformer's position was that regulating the "interests" could only be achieved by taking them out of politics. (This paralleled the effort to end corruption in government by establishing civil service as the alternative to patronage.) They decided that the chosen instruments for this depoliticization should be independent commissions whose members were appointed for set terms and were not responsible to the President. The staggered terms varied from agency to agency, averaging about seven years, though the members of the Federal Reserve Board are in for 14. They float in the constitutional blue, being subject to direction from neither the President nor Congress, a fact which often makes it very hard for an Administration adequately to implement policy — since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board have been at daggers drawn.

The first big effort came in the 1880s with a drive to regulate the railroads, which were joyously operating in a lucrative limbo created by the Supreme Court, which had held them immune to state regulation. Understandably the managers took a dim view of the proposed Interstate Commerce Commission, but in 1892 their crack lawyer, Richard S. Olney (later U.S. Attorney General), took a different view. He urged support for the Commission because it "can be made of great use to the railroads. It satisfies the popular clamor for a government supervision of railroads, at the same time that that supervision is almost entirely nominal."

Then Olney, with brilliant prescience, anticipated the history of all such commissions: "Further, the older such a commission gets to be, the more inclined it will be found to take the business and railroad view of things. It thus becomes a sort of barrier between the railroad corporations and the people and a sort of protection against hasty and crude legislation hostile to railroad interests. . . The part of wisdom is not to distroy the Commission, but to utilize it."

Well, Mr. President, I trust the tabbies will become even more somnolent, and thanks for a good laugh.

Salute your day with the will to do your best even if all circumstances are not to your liking. You may profit more by working with others than on your own.

YOU BORN TODAY are almost destined to reach top-level attainment and can become a leader in almost any field you choose as a life work. The Leoite is endowed with great personal magnetism, a brilliant wit, and is delightful, buoyant company when he is at his best. On the minus side, however, he is inclined to be too opinionated, obstinate and domineering. You MUST learn to conquer such tendencies lest they offset the many fine traits which draw people to you instinctively. You are unusually progressive and often unconventional in your methods, since you are likely to overturn tradition and institute new orders — which you will label reforms. Fields in which you could excel: business, journalism, sports, sculpture, the law.

U.S. records trade surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a big drop in oil imports, the United States had a record monthly trade surplus in June of more than $1.7 billion, the government said today.

It was the fifth straight monthly surplus in the surprisingly strong trade sector of the economy, the Commerce Department said.

The quantity of oil imported during June fell 26 per cent from May, to a low for the year of nearly 118.2 million barrels. It had been 159 million barrels in May.

By importing less oil, the United States saved $499 million over May, as the value of oil imports declined to slightly more than $1.3 billion, also a low for the year. May oil imports were valued at more than $1.8 billion.

The Commerce Department said the nation's trade surplus for the first six months of the year totaled more than $5.4 billion, compared with a deficit of more than $2.4 billion last year.

Ohio labor force reaches 4,910,302

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's labor force was estimated at 4,910,302 at the end of June, with a 9.1 per cent unemployment rate, the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services said.

The OBES division of research and statistics estimated that 446,268 Ohioans were out of work at the end of the month.

The bureau said 55 per cent of all Ohioans are employed in the state's seven largest counties.

Adams County, leading the state with 18.6 per cent unemployment, has the smallest labor force of 6,526. Cuyahoga County has a 739,186-member labor force and an unemployment rate of 8.8 per cent.

Consumer credit measure pushed

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A House subcommittee is studying a bill which would require credit reporting agencies to send copies of credit reports to the person being reported upon.

The bill, presently in the consumer subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, would significantly expand the rights of consumers to know the contents of credit reports about themselves.

The measure is sponsored by Rep. John Thompson, D-15 Cleveland, who said the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act does not go far enough to protect the privacy of individuals.

"The system of credit reporting is an industry which works in secret," Thompson said. "Because under the act the credit reporting agency is not even required to let a person see his files, only hear what is in them, it is possible for inaccuracies to exist which brand a person for life."

Thompson said persons have been refused insurance, bank loans and credit because of false information in their credit files. He said consumers now have little chance to correct those errors.

Under his bill, when a business requests a credit report on an individual, the individual must also receive a copy of the report and the name of the business requesting the check.

"The cost to the credit reporting companies would be minimal," Thompson said. "Only the price of an envelope and a stamp.

"The benefit in human terms would be far greater. We will be providing access by individuals to information about their own lives which had never been provided before, and we could help eliminate some of the abuses which have occurred in the past."

Thompson said he doesn't want to kill the credit reporting business. He said it serves a legitimate function in the business world.

"I am only trying to maintain the right of privacy, which the individual has lost and eliminate this right of secrecy which these credit investigating agencies have acquired."

In ancient Rome, the Emperor Nero proclaimed that only he could wear the purpole, a fabric colored with extracts from murex shellfish. Seafaring Phoenician merchants made the regal dye and grew rich selling purple wool for about $150 a pound, the National eographic Society says.

Reader says ERA's a right to no privacy

DEAR ABBY: You indicated that you were in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment. I am amazed at you. Don't you know that if it becomes law, there will no longer be seperate public restrooms for men and women? And the men and women will not have seperate quarters in college dorms, prisons, schools, locker rooms, and even public hospitals? Do your homework!

AGAINST ERA IN ILLINOIS

DEAR AGAINST: Do yours! In 1965, the Supreme Court established the consitutional right to privacy. This permits the separation of the sexes in all places involving sleeping, disrobing and all other private functions.

DEAR ABBY: I have been teaching Sunday school for five years. I teach first-grade children who are 6-years-old.

My problem is the pastor's son. This child pulls rank on me at every turn I make. He lets me know that because he is the pastor's son, I can't tell him what to do.

You can imagine what this does to me and the other children. I get absolutely no cooperation from his parents. The father is merely an older replica of his son.

What can I DO TO REMEDY THIS SITUATION? I am fond of my class and love to teach, but I can't take much more verbal abuse or the kicking this child dishes out. I've bent over backwards to be nice to him but get nowhere.

MISTREATED

DEAR MIS: Discipline him as though he were the son of Joe Blow. And if he doesn't shape up, tell his parents to keep the boy at home, or YOU'LL stay home.

DEAR ABBY: About that bride who wanted to lock the doors of the church five minutes before the cermony: Most cities and states have laws against locking the doors of public buildings when people are assembled in them. The reason is obvious. Sign me,

FIRE MARSHALL

DEAR FIRE MARSHALL: You are right, of course. Now, why didn't I think of that?

DEAR ABBY: You gave good advice to the widow who didn't know what to tell people when they asked how her husband had died. (He committed suicide.)

I'd like to reinforce your view. Many years ago, when I was the editor of a small newspaper, one of the town's leading citizens, who was also an attorney and church leader, made some bad investments. Shortly thereafter, he killed himself.

His two daughters, who were my cherished friends, sent their boyfriends to ask me to please leave out that their father had committed suicide when his death was reported in the paper. The competing newspaper agreed to omit it if we would.

I refused, saying, "If we omit it, the girls will be living a lie for the rest of their lives. If we print the truth, it will be forgotten in 24 hours."

I published the truth and the family admitted afterward that I had done the right thing. They also bought 50 newspapers.

See 8 per cent price increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices paid by the average American are expected to rise about 8 per cent during 1975 as a whole, compared with 12.2 per cent last year, the Council on Wage and Price Stability reports.

The council said that the Consumer Price Index during the first quarter of the year rose at a rate of 6 per cent and that the economic recovery during the second half of this year should not cause prices to rise more quickly.

Ship survivor recalls sharks

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP)— The current wave of shark fear brought on by the movie "Jaws," is nothing new to a group of former seamen who will gather this weekend at Indianapolis, Ind.

The 316 survivors of the sinking of the USS Indianpolis in the South Pacific July 30, 1945, no doubt will be talking about the movie as well, according to former boatswain's mate James E. Reid of Middletown, Ohio.

Reid, who recently suffered a heart attack, is hoping his doctor will give him permission to see the film and attend the reunion.

"I really want to see it," said Reid, one of the survivors of the crew of 1,196. He was among those who watched helplessly as some 300 shipmates were killed by sharks.

"I would really like to see how they deal with the shark attacks" in the film, said Reid, who works for an insurance firm.

He recalled that the Indianapolis was returning to Leyte, in the Philippines after delivering component parts tor the first Atomic Bomb dropped on Japan to the base on Tinian. The cruiser was sunk by a torpedo fired by a Japanese submarine.

Reid said the ship sank in 12 minutes leaving the crew no time to send out an SOS or utilize the lifeboats. He said the situation was further complicated because the craft was off course which hindered rescue efforts.

"We had to get away from the ship fast or the current would have sucked us under," recalled Reid who later testified in a courts martial of the ship's commander.

"We could see the feet of the men who got caught in the ship's suction sticking up out of the water."

The first day the survivors thought the Japanese would take them prisoner. "But by that night we realized they weren't coming."

Reid said they had no food or water for five days.

"The sharks would come up underneath the float and grab for our legs. We had to kick and scream to scare them away."

By the third day, the men were fighting among themselves. Some were hallucinating because they drank the sea water, Reid said.

"One of them said he saw General MacArthur standing on an island which he said was only a hundred yards away. He started swimming away, and then a shark got him," said Reid, recalling this happened to many of the men.

"They'd start swimming and then we'd see a shark's fin going towards them. Then they would disappear, and their life preserver would pop up to the surface empty."

The survivors were rescued five days after the sinking. Reid said it took two days to get everyone out of the water.

Reid was later called to Washington D.C. to testify against Capt. Charles V. McVay. McVay was convicted of failing to keep the ship on the proper course.

Massive arson project planned

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Battelle Memorial Insitutue has been hired to evaluate arson education in the United States and to assess resources available to combat the problem in Ohio.

The Ohio FAIR Plan Underwriting Association said its board of governors had authorized the study to begin immediately.

The FAIR Plan (Fair Access to Insurance Requirements) is a pool of fire insurance companies licensed to do business in Ohio. It said arson was one of the most diffficult crimes to investigate.

"A successful arsonist burns up almost all of the evidence of his crime," said William Morris, chairman of the FAIR Plan board of governors.

"It takes a lot of training to enable insurance and law enforcement investigators to gather evidence and trace it to the arsonist," he added.

Battelle's Columbus laboratories will conduct the four-month study of existing arson-prevention and investigation programs. It is to interview arson education experts throughout the nation.

Battelle said there are more than 40,000 arson-related fires in Ohio each year, causing more destruction of $73 million in property and an uncounted number of human lives.

"Yet only about 10 per cent of the arson cases are ever investigated and less than three per cent result in convictions," Battelle said. "The odds, obviously, are overwhelming in favor of the arsonist," the international research organization added.

The total cost of the research is estimated at be between $400,000 and $500,000.

Battelle is expected to come up with a way in which information obtained during the research can be used in a plan for an arson-training and public-awareness program.

Eugene L. Jewell, chief of the state arson bureau and chairman of the Blue Ribbon Arson Committee, said the Battelle study would be "the most comprehensive professional research project of its kind in the United States."

"The reduction of arson in Ohio requires much more than just the traditional hit-and-miss approach," Jewell said.

The committee suggested a follow-up plan that would include arson training for law enforcement officers, the insurance industry and state insurance officials who deal with arson. It also suggested a documentary film with "national impact" be produced on the subject.

Ohio Insurance Director Harry V. Jump stressed the public-awareness aspects of the proposal.

"By and large," Jump said, "the public does not see arson as a direct threat to its own safety or security in the same way as it does many other crimes, such as armed robbery."

However, he said, each fire has the potential of harming both firefighters and private citizens. Firefighting costs and insurance claims must eventually be absorbed by the public, he added.

Ohio had another clear, mild night with temperatures at daybreak ranging from 57 in Youngstown to 71 along the Ohio River in the extreme southern part of the state.

High pressure over Ohio this morning was drifting slowly east to New York and Pennsylvania. A nearly stationary front across West Virginia and Kentucky was gradually weakening and was expected to disappear from the weather map.

Skies will be sunny for the next couple of days although some cloudiness will form over the southern counties. Showers should remain south of the Ohio River.

A gradual warming trend will be the main weather feature. Afternoon highs will be close to 90 in parts of central and southern Ohio today and in many sections of the state Wednesday. Little change is likely in the weather pattern through the week until a chance of showers appears about the end of the week.

Ohio Extended Outlook (Thursday through Saturday)

Fair Thursday and Friday and a chance of showers Saturday. Highs in the upper 80s and low 90s. Lows in the 60s.

Medical college awarded grant

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio State University College of Medicine has been awarded a $2.7 million federal grant toward construction of a health professions facility, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Monday.

The total cost of the project is $12.7 million.

Flurry of bills passed by House

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State lawmakers began their expected final week of the summer session Monday with a flurry of action on bills, some of them individual members' projects.

Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, who fought for Ohio's ratification of the federal women's Equal Rights Amendment, won 29-0 Senate approval of a bill prohibiting discriminatory credit practices.

Her measure, which now goes to the House, bans in particular any discrimination in the extension of credit on the basis of sex or marital status. It provides that the grantors of credit must use the same criteria for all applicants.

"It will permit all Ohioans, regardless of sex and marital status, to participate fully in our economy," the senator asserted.

In other action, the Senate added its approval to House measures that permit the issuance of food stamps to new applicants within 24 hours if the applicant is destitute, and to ban trespassing in township cemeteries after dark.

At a night floor session that lasted more than three hours, the House approved and sent the Senate measures to:

—Repeal an antiquated statute authorizing cities to build railroads, but allow creation of a board of trustees for a railroad owned by Cincinnati.

—Establish a procedure for recalling township trustees.

—Provide for the licensing of county homes by the state Health Department.

—Authorize the use of hearing examiners by local boards of health.

Lake Superior pollution heavy in some spots

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — There is extensive pollution in several areas of Lake Superior, reports the International Joint Commission, but the overall quality of Lake Superior's water is very good.

The IJC, in its annual report on Lake Superior's water quality, said the major pollution problem areas of the lake are the harbor of Duluth, Minn., and Superior Wis.; Silver Bay, Minn.; Thunder Bay, Ont., and along the lake's south shore in Wisconsin.

However, the report noted that efforts are under way to abate the pollution in all areas mentioned.

The commission's report said the major source of water pollution in the Silver Bay area continues to be taconite wastes discharged into the lake from Reserve Mining Co.'s taconite processing plant at Silver Bay.

Reserve is under a federal appeals court order to switch to on-land disposal of the taconite tailings, which contain tiny asbestos fibers that have been linked to cancer.

Controlling board seen powerless

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State Controlling Board met Monday and agreed it no longer existed, or at least was powerless to act.

However, a compromise was reported in the House that will reactivate the agency later this week, perhaps as early as Wednesday.

Barry Keefe, the board's president, and the other six members agreed that line item vetoes by Gov. James A. Rhodes in the state budget bill June 29 took away most if not all the board's authority.

Rhodes rejected several items in the budget which put under the board's control several appropriations he said should have gone directly to state departments. He charged majority Democrats with trying to usurp powers of the executive branch.

The vehicle for the compromise is a bill approved last week by the Senate that would establish the board in permanent law. It may be acted on in the House today.

In the past, the board has been perpetuated by language contained in each two-year appropriations measure.

Keese said he would reconvene the board so it can resume its business when Rhodes receives and signs the immediately effective emergency bill.

Made up of six legislators and Keefe, who represents the administration, the board's duties consist generally of releasing funds to the various departments and seeing that they are spent for the purposes intended by the legislature.

Total taxes levied hit $1.450 billion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Total taxes levied in 1974 by all governmental agenices in Ohio's cities upon real estate, public utility and tangible personal property amounted to $1.450 billion, the Ohio Public Expenditure Council said Monday.

The council said the total was an increase of $76.6 million, or 5.6 per cent, over 1973.

Property taxes for schools in the cities accounted for $53.5 million, or 68 per cent of the increase. The figure does not include the 10 per cent real property tax rollback or homestead exemption authorized by law.

Property taxes for schools in the cities went over the $1 billion mark for the first time, the council said. The total was $1,082.002 billion.

The 10 largest Ohio cities accounted for $642.7 million of the total property taxes levied. There are 232 Ohio cities.

New jobs for women

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

WOMEN are breaking barriers and taking over jobs that once were the sole province of men, jobs far removed from shorthand, typing and conventional "openings for women."

At Phillips Petroleum's Avon refinery in Martinez, Calif., three have become the first peacetime female "yardmen" in company history. All had previously held routine "women" jobs:

Pat Brown, 24, was a waitress; Martha Buckingham, 32, a teacher and, later, a secretary; Mary Krajewski, 21, a golf course greenkeeper, an assistant to a seamstrress and a cocktail waitress.

In the line of Heavy Duty

In their new posts they do far different work — pushing wheelbarrows, shoveling coke, assisting in cleanups, operating jackhammers, digging ditches, driving fork lift units and heavy duty trucks, scrubbing concrete, cleaning storage tanks, climbing high on refinery columns and working inside refinery vessels.

What attracted them to heavy-duty jobs? Pay that was higher than any received in any of their previous posts.

The work is physically demanding but, they say, it's worth the effort because they couldn't earn as much in office or restaurant jobs.

Record Time

Their first morning on the job, the all-girl trio was assigned to dig a 200-foot-long ditch. Determined to prove themselves, they worked like demons for a half a day and were leaning on their shovels when the foreman arrived. He started chewing them out for goofing off, but his tirade stopped short when, to his embarrassment, he discovered that the job, programmed for two days, was completed.

Reaction from refinery co-workers has ranged from curiosity to amusement. One man approached Martha Buckingham on the job, looked her over and announced, "Well, now I've seen everything!"

"No you haven't," she told him. "You haven't seen anything until I'm made foreman!"

Throughout industry men are reacting and trying to adjust to women in new roles. One field they're beginning to conquer is security:

At General Motors' Hydramatic Division plant in Michigan two women have been added to the security staff. Their duties involve checking passes, directing traffic, keeping track of trucks and other vehicles moving through the gates and patrolling the plant.

"You have to be super-alert," one of the new officers, Sandra Richards, observed. "The plant is deserted at night. When you're making rounds, you have to be ready to use common sense in a tight spot."

A national security services firm, Guardsmark, Inc., is also employing women. They guard high rise buildings, airports, hospitals, even banks. When called on to provide round-the-clock security for a warehouse and distribution center in Pennsylvania, the firm dispatched an all-woman team, including one lead lieutenant, two shift sergeants and 10 guards. Their arrival created a stir but it died down when they handled the assignment like pros.

Talk to a woman who has pioneered in a formerly all-male field and there are two things she's sure to tell you. One is that a woman has to work harder to prove herself. The other is that when she does, she's accepted. One of Phillips Petroleum's three yardwomen summed it up: "OK, it wasn't easy to begin with but we did it. It's satisfying to know we've taken three small steps for womankind."

Shirt-Tales

PARROTS in bright red take a perch on the blue ground of man-tailored cotton-rayon shirt designed by Eva Shapiro.

FOR THE GOOD SPORT, there's a golfing shirt with easy-action short sleeves. Pair it with slacks, a skirt or with shorts.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

WHAT's a dazzling blonde charmer from Romania doing on Seventh Avenue? Eva Shapiro says she's having fun and making her fortune. Formerly the designer and directrice of Via Veneto, a house known for its elegant wool and silk costumes, she's onto something new this season. She's joined forces with 23-year-old Robert Turkel in a new sportswear house, Robert Janan Ltd., that's already making a name for itself. The selling points are classic styling at a price — a low one.

For her first line, Eva concentrates on the shirt look.

"The shirt is so well-tailored," she said in her charming accented voice, "that it makes a woman look extra feminine."

In Eva's hands, the shirt is not only a shirt. For several of her super summer styles, it grows to dress length.

America's way of wedding changes little through years, author says

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What's dreamed of for years, planned for months, remembered forever—and over in half an hour?

A wedding.

Eighty per cent of all first marriages in this country are formal, says Marcia Seligson, who attended some 200 ceremonies, formal and otherwise, while gathering material for "The Eternal Bliss Machine," her new book on America's way of wedding.

"The basic thing I learned in my travels is how little has changed," she says. "Most kids want exactly what their parents had. It's as though there were never such things as riots on campus, a sexual revolution, drugs. It's really startling.

"The kids getting married barefoot on the rocks are an infinitesimal number," she adds. "Girls are programmed from the time they are infants to be traditional brides. It's an ingrained part of our culture."

As a result, the bridal industry takes in $7 billion annually from over two million weddings, notes Miss Seligson, who got interested in the subject when she was a bridesmaid six times in one summer.

"I always knew there was something ridiculous about superweddings, but when I found out one of my friends was having her gown 'embalmed' to preserve it, I knew there was something hilarious that was worth investigating," recalls the vivacious young author.

During two years of research she talked to such wedding-oriented entrepreneurs as banquet managers, catereres, florists, band leaders, cake makers, store bridal consultants, ice sculptors, honeymoon resort people, wedding ring manufacturers, apparel designers, people who rent tents and who plank over swimming pools, clergy men of all faiths and ladies who rent dovers. Sometimes she pretended to be a prospective bride and sometimes she admitted to being a reporter.

Among the weddings Miss Seligson attended was a Beverly Hills bash where the mashed potatoes and family poodle were dyed pink to match the bridesmaids' dresses, a Texas affair where the parties went on for so many weeks that the ceremony was an anticlimax, and an underwater wedding where the bride wore a white wet suit covered in soggy lace and the minister had taken scuba diving lessons in order to tie the damp knot.

"I went to one wedding where the couple, all the wedding party, the minister and guests were nude," reports Miss Seligson, who joined them "because I didn't want to stick out like a sore thumb."

She says in today's "new" weddings, usually held outdoors, there's a tremendous involvement in the vows, which the couple often write themselves.

"In traditional weddings the guests are usually more interested in whether the chopped liver will be beef or chicken than in what the kids are saying to each other," she declares.

Some of the credit — or the blame — for the all-out wedding goes to the industry that trumpets the message it's a once-in-a-lifetime thing.

"That implies foreverness. The bridal industry tries to tell you that a formal wedding fosters marriage stability, but that's absolute nonsense," Miss Seligson scoffs.

However, she concedes that everybody must want a wedding or the tradition wouldn't continue and grow.

"Poor people start saving from the day the daughter is born," she says. "The wedding becomes a sort of panacea for all our fears, a status symbol that says we made it bi big and daddy can send his daughter off in materialistic style, America's term for success."

Despite such excesses as a huge ice sculpture of a dolphin with black caviar spewing out of its gullet, Miss Seligson thinks there is a basic need for "rites of passage" when moving from one state in life to another.

"Every civilization in history has had some kind of marriage ceremony," she points out. "I think ritual is a crucial, fundamental human need, but when humanness gets lost then it becomes ridiculous."

Adult counseling provided

VIA program topic at Kiwanis meeting

The Volunteers in Action program was discussed Monday night at the Washington C. H. Kiwanis Club meeting by Mrs. Leroy Davis, a principal developer of the plan.

Mrs. Davis explained that VIA provides adult counseling services to troubled youngsters under the age of 18 who request it.

The concept was developed over a year ago. Through meetings with Fayette County Juvenile Judge Rollo Marchant, former juvenile judge Omar Schwart and probation officer Marshall Boggs, Mrs. Davis discovered there was definitely a need for a volunteer counseling service of some sort.

The present program was initiated in January of this year. Since that time, 15 volunteers have received formal training and now spend anywhere from 15 minutes to two hours per week with the youngsters assigned to them.

VIA especially concerns itself with three groups of children — those who show signs of potential delinquency, those on probation and others who have recently returned from a juvenile institution.

None of the youths are coerced into participation. Only those who desire counseling are referred to a volunteer. Unfortunately, at the present time, there are 10 youngsters who would like to participate, but are unable to find a volunteer.

Mrs. Davis emphasized that it required only a few minutes each week to call or visit a youngster in search of a friend. She urged anyone who is willing to take an interest in Fayette County's youth to contact her at 335-2129.

Many young adults who are "turned off" at home respond to someone who takes an interest in them.

During the business meeting, club president Guy Foster thanked all Kiwanians for their handling of ticket sales at the Fayette County Fair.

Harold Heckaman reminded members of their assignments for the Old Fashioned Bargain Days ice cream social. The club will sponsor the social on the Courthouse lawn beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Congress unlikely to accept auto emission moratorium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is unlikely to accept President Ford's proposal to place a moratorium on tougher antipollution standards for automobiles, congressional sources say.

The legislative draft sent by Ford to Congress on Monday would repeal the emission standards now scheduled to go into effect through 1981, and instead would continue the present standards.

"I don't think that's feasibile or realistic — not if we're going to try to bring about clean air in this nation," said Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chairman of the House subcommittee on health and the environment.

Rogers' subcommittee is now considering legislation that would lessen somewhat the standards for the next two years now set to go into effect under the Clean Air Act of 1970. But those less stringent standards would be tougher than the present ones, which Ford wants continued.

In the Senate, the environmental pollution subcommittee is considering a bill to extend current standards through 1979 for half of an automaker's production but to require the other half to conform to stricter standards.

"The subcommittee has considered a wide range of proposals, including some similar to the one that the President has made, and they are not moving toward such a suspension," said an aide to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

Muskie, the subcommittee chairman, is the main author of the 1970 law. "Sen. Muskie is not in favor of such a suspension," the aide said.

The White House issued a statement explaining Ford's proposal, saying that pollution from automobiles already has been significantly reduced by federal standards applied over the past five years.

The White House statement said Ford's proposal to eliminate any further reduction in auto emission limits through 1981 would "permit a balance among the important objectives of improving air quality, protecting public health and safety, and avoiding unnecessary increases in consumer costs for automobiles, decreases in gasoline mileage, and increases in the nation's dependence on imported oil."

Spokesmen for the nation's automakers supported Ford's proposal, as they did earlier in the year when the President indicated he would recommend continuing present standards.

Sabina woman fined by judge

A Sabina woman was found guilty of contempt of court while a charge of assault filed against a Washington C.H. man was dismissed Monday in Washington C.H. Municipal Court by acting Judge Robert L. Simpson.

Ilene Slone, 20, Sabina, was found guilty of the contempt charge on a previous disposition of a case charging her with passing a bad check at Seaway. Judge Simpson revoked a suspended 10-day sentence on the previous case.

Donald Clickner, 35, of 627 Harrison St., pleaded innocent to a charge of assault, filed on a private warrant, and the case was dismissed with court costs to be paid by the prosecuting witness.

Iowa corn crop facing disaster

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Farmers in Iowa need a good, soaking rain within a few days or they will risk losing up to 650 million bushels of corn, state Secretary of Agriculture Robert Lounsberry says.

At current market prices averaging about about $2.85 a bushel for Iowa corn, the potential loss to farmers could be in excess of $1.8 billion.

"If it doesn't come this week, we'll be hurt more than we'd like to admit," Lounsberry said Monday. "The drought conditions might cut yield 30 to 50 bushels per acre."

Iowa produces about 20 per cent of the nation's corn crop and in a good year will harvest more than 1.2 billion bushels. The forecast for this year had been 109 bushels an acre.

The National Corn Growers Association says it is surveying the crop nationwide and it will be next week before it knows the situation elsewhere. Lounsberry says the weather has been good in Indiana and Illinois, which follow Iowa in corn production.

Until now, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated that U.S. farmers will produce a record wheat and corn crop this year that will meet domestic and export demands without seriously affecting American consumer prices.

The National Weather Service forecasts mostly sunny and hot weather for Iowa the next few days, with temperatures expected to top 100 degrees today.

Iowa's corn and soybeans crops are suffering from a combination of excessive heat and insufficient moisture, the Iowa Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday.

"To recover, we would have to have a good inch of rain spread out over a 12 to 24 hour period," Lounsberry said.

Up to an inch of rain fell in scattered Iowa locations last week, but the varied rainfall brought only temporary relief.

Last year, a combination of early flooding followed by a severe drought and an early frost cut the average yield to 81 bushels an acre.

Lounsberry said the corn crop is now in the critical pollination stage which, without rain soon, could result in the corn "producing cobs with no corn on them."

Trouble for the Iowa corn crop came about a month after heavy rains dealt a serious blow crops in the fertile Red River Valley area of western Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration has issued a preliminary estimate that flooding brought crop damage of $1.5 billion in the two-state area, including carryover damage to 1976 production.

The primary crops affected in the Red River Valley were potatoes, sugar beets, sunflowers, barley, wheat and flax.

Joan Little trial starts

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — A 21-year-old black woman on trial for the murder of a white jailer she says was trying to attack her predicts the prosecution is "going to be out like wolves to get me."

Joan Little made the forecast in talking with reporters during a lunchtime break soon after testimony began in her trial Monday.

Her comments came after a Washington, N.C., police officer testified he found the partially nude body of Clarence Alligood in the Beaufort County jail cell that had been occupied by Miss Little.

Sgt. Jerry Helms, the first prosecution witness, said Alligood's body was naked from the waist down. Helms said the jailer, 62, had an ice pick in his right hand and his trousers in his left hand.

A second Washington policeman, Patrolman Johnny Rose, returns to the stand today as the state continues setting the stage for its contention that Miss Little killed Alligood during an escape.

Helms and Rose differed on some of the details they recounted on the stand. Rose said he made a quick examination of Alligood's body, including an attempt to find a pulse, but did not recall seeing anything in his hand.

Helms testified that he went to the jail about 4 a.m. last Aug. 27 at Rose's request to assist in the booking of a female prisoner. When they arrived at the jail they found the door unlocked, he said.

Rose said that after the discovery of Alligood's body, he released his prisoner, a woman arrested for drunkeness, returned to his patrol car and started searching for Miss Little.

Both officers testified that a pair of men's shoes were on the floor outside the cell. Alligood wore only an undershirt, shirt and socks.

Helms said a pair of eyeglasses and men's undershorts were on the floor beside the cell bunk where Alligood was slumped. He and Rose both testified that they noticed blood on the jailer's forehead.

A medical report released after the slaying indicated Alligood had been stabbed 11 times with an ice pick.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Snidely Foon, the noted TV critic, is at Camp Rerun this summer, taking a course on serious criticism of television. His editor has told him a simple "this show stinks" no longer will do.

While Snidely has been terribly busy with classes called "How to Define the Dance" and "Is Masterpiece Theater a Bore?," he still finds time to write about life at Camp Rerun, located in upstate Manhattan.

He says the camp, established in 1956 with a grant from the Tommy Sands Foundation for the Performing Arts, recently opened a TV museum filled with artifacts of major moments in television.

The museum is run by a group of chuckling retirees who used to tape ho-hos for the laugh machines of many wellknown situation comedies.

"Few make a living from laugh tracks now because their laughter is old," Snidely writes. "This is a shame, but that's 'show biz.'"

He says a major draw at the recently-opened museum is a Nattering Nabob of Negativism, a lifelike machine donated by the three networks by a Mr. S.T. Agnew of Maryland.

"For a quarter, the Nabob will natter for two minutes," Snidely says. "For 50 cents, he won't."

Other treasures from the TV museum include a blown fuse from The Electric Company, a pound of treacle from the Doris Day Show and a searing 1969 political joke from the Smothers Brothers.

Also on display are Gomer Pyle' old liberty card, an ounce of guano from the Batcave, a portable riposte from Firing Line, and, from Route 66, a speeding ticket issued in Thunderbolt, Ga.

Snidely's list of artifacts boggles the mind. It includes a used scowl from Ben Casey, five boogie lessons from American Bandstand and a clear-cut moral issue from Gunsmoke.

From Mission Impossible, there's a rare edition of the only three speaking lines ever assigned Peter Lupas. For war buffs, a special treat: A destroyed Japanese battleship from Victory at Sea.

"The TV museum is a bargain for vacationeers," Snidely said in closing. "You get a three-hour guided tour, lunch and a free picture of Gale Storm. And it only costs $3 to get in.

"There is one drawback, though.

"It costs $4 to get out."

If melted at a uniform rate, the Antarctic icecap would yield about six million cubic miles of water — enough to feed the Mississippi River for 50,000 years, all United States rivers for 17,000 years or all rivers in the world for 750 years.

Reds keep winning, taxing bullpen crew

Nolan pulled in 3rd to set humble record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitching coach Larry Shepard thinks Gary Nolan "may be feeling those two years off." The Cincinnati Reds are feeling it too — you can bet your bullpen.

"That's a beautiful record to hold," said a sarcastic Sparky Anderson. "It's one I don't want."

The Reds defeated the San Francisco Giants 8-4 Monday night, widening their division lead to 13½ games, but set a major league record for futility when their starting pitcher failed to finish for the 44th consecutive game.

"I was praying I wouldn't have to use a relief pitcher," moaned Anderson.

Nolan, who earlier this year won six straight games and appeared ready to restablish himself as one of baseball's top hurlers, found himself in trouble from the start.

When the Giants loaded the bases in the second and third innings, Anderson decided he had seen enough.

Enter Pedro Borbon, who quelled the uprising to record his sixth victory in eight decisions.

Dan Driessen's three-run homer in the first inning and a two-run single by George Foster, who was pinch hitting for Driessen, powered the Reds to their 42nd home victory in 53 games.

Asked what Nolan's problem has been, Anderson referred reporters to Shepard.

"All I watch is if they are hitting the ball," said Anderson. "The pitcher can bounce the ball up there and I don't care as long as he gets the hitters out."

Shepard feels Nolan "may not be throwing enough between starts — and he's lost his rhythm.

"The problem is location. He's throwing harder but his location is poorer. Early this year I said everything was going too good. Now he may be feeling those two years off."

Anderson's insertion of Foster as pinch hitter didn't set well with many of the 28,044 fans. But it paid off.

"I don't feel for nobody," said Anderson, who had warned the Reds at the end of last year that he was through "being Mr. Nice Guy."

"I don't manage that way," said Anderson. "The thing is the ballclub, not the individual. I try to put the best people up at the right time."

Foster responded by stinging his former teammates.

It was his fourth pinch hit in eight attempts this year and he credited his success to former pinch hitting great Smokey Burgess, an ex-Red.

Just when it looked like baseball fans wouldn't have anything to get excited about for the rest of the summer, what with Oakland, Cincinnati and Boston running away with their respective divisions. . . along came Philadelphia.

The Fightin' Phils beat Pittsburgh 5-2 Monday night, their eighth straight victory over the Bucs. The loss left Pittsburgh a respectable 4½ games in front in the National League East, but at least the Phils are close enough to stir some sabre-rattling on both sides.

A pair of young right-handers, Pittsburgh's Bruce Kison and Philadelphia's Larry Christenson, were locked in a 1-1 battle in the eighth when the Phils' broke it open with three runs. Dick Allen's bloop triple down the right field line drove in two runs and Ollie Brown singled for the third one.

Mets 11, Cardinals 7

Felix Millan, who has hit in 21 of his last 22 games, collected two doubles and two singles and drove in three runs for New York.

Braves 5, Dodgers 3

The Braves jumped on Los Angeles reliever Mike Marshall for three runs in the eighth—a two-run single by Biff Pocoroba and an RBI-single by Phil Niekro—to win it.

Padres 2, Astros 0

Dave Freisleben, 5-10, tossed a five-hitter and drove in a run with an infield grounder as San Diego's winning streak and Houston's losing streak both reached five games.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Jose Cardenal's first homer in nearly two months, a tiebreaking two-run shot in the fifth inning, gave Chicago the victory.

Twins 9, Royals 8

Lyman Bostock's basesloaded single with one out in the bottom of the ninth boosted the Twins past Kansas City and handed Whitey Herzog his first loss in five games as manager of the Royals.

A's 12, Rangers 6

Reggie Jackson's 26th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, and Joe Rudi's two RBI helped the A's rout Texas and widen their West Division lead over Kansas City to 10½ games.

White Sox 3, Angels 2

Wilbur Wood recorded his eighth victory in his last 11 decisions, teaming with Rich Gossage to six-hit California.

Youth softball tourney planned

Plans for a youth softball tournament August 8-10 at Eyman Park are in the making.

There will be one tournament for boys and one for girls, and teams should be limited to 12 players, who should be between the ages of 14-17 or attended high school this past year.

Entry fee for the tournament is $25 and individual trophies will be given for first, second and third place finishers. There will also be a trophy for the most home runs.

The Fayette County Softball Association will umpire the tourney and if teams need or want coaches, they will be supplied.

Also the champion boy's team will play the girl's champion in the tourney's final game.

Interested persons should contact Chester or Betty Estep at Eyman Park in the evening or call 335-1985 as soon as possible.

Robinson flub helps Tribe

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rick Waits got into the game only because of a blunder by Manager Frank Robinson, but the rookie Cleveland pitcher wound up with his first major league victory.

The fifth of six Cleveland pitchers, Waits retired Dave Duncan with the bases loaded in the ninth inning Monday night after the Orioles had scored three runs to forge a 5-5 tie.

Charlie Spikes, who earlier had hit a solo homer, rapped a two-run single in the 10th and Waits was credited with the 7-5 victory even though he had to be saved by Fred Beene when the Orioles threatened once more.

Waits, a 23-year-old left-hander who was recalled Saturday from Oklahoma City, was shoved into action when Robinson mistakenly forced veteran Jackie Brown to be removed from the mound.

The Cleveland skipper rushed onto the field after Baltimore scored the tying run in the ninth on a force play, with Tommy Davis just beating a possible game-ending double play by sliding into first base.

Robinson went out to quiet first baseman Rico Carty, who disputed the call. That mission accomplished, Robinson got into unexpected trouble before retreating to the dugout.

"I saw Brown standing there looking dejected," Robinson said, "and by force of habit I went over to perk him up. But when I reached the mound, I knew I had goofed."

Pitching coach Harvey Haddix had already gone to the mound while Davis was at bat and when Robinson got there, Brown had to be lifted because it was the second visit in one inning.

Fancy cars draw Bengals watchers

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP)— Every day the fans show up to watch the Cincinnati Bengals in training.

And between drills, one of the sideshows is walking through the team's parking lot for a look at the stunning automobiles.

The one that steals the show is a 1957 British-made four-door Jaguar sedan, a beautiful gray and silver job bearing New Hampshire license tags.

Sherman White owns the car, figures it sold for $5,000 originally, paid $3,000 for it last winter and estimates to build it now would make the price somewhere around $17,000.

"I'd been looking for a car like it in good condition for a long time," White said, "and my dad saw this one advertised in Maine, went up and looked at it and bought it for me," said the defensive end, who was since paid his father back.

Now he's in the market for a rare Mercedes roadster of the 1940s variety, and would like to get a pre-World War II Packard, preferably a V-12.

Essex Johnson drives a bright red Jensen Healey roadster and his Ohio tags says ESSEX.

Boobie Clark, Bengals running back, has his first name on the plates attached to his gray Continental, while Vern Holland has his nickname "SUKI" on the front of his automobile.

Linebacker Al Beauchamp's white Cadillac has a license plate bearing 58-AB, his number.

Not everyone drives a fancy car to work. There a half-ton pickup owned by wide receiver Chip Myers and defensive back Tommy Casanova has a Cheyenne Blazer which he uses on hunting and fishing trips.

Someone, strolling amidst the ritzy looking cars, spotted a conservative-looking auto.

"I wonder," they asked, "what dude owns that thing?"

Shaw nails down cage league title

Shaw wrapped up the Community Education Basketball League Championship Monday night at Eyman Park by handing Avoset a 50-46 loss.

The loss dropped Avoset to 3-2 and upped Shaw's mark to 5-0.

Bengals to play in 'Hall of Fame' game

Four gridders to be inducted Saturday

CANTON, Ohio — Four new names will be added to the Hall of Immortals as the Pro Football Hall of Fame stages its 13th annual enshrinement ceremonies on Saturday.

The induction rites, set for 2 p.m. on the front steps of the pro grid shrine, highlight an event-filled "Football's Greatest Weekend" festival that for two days focuses the attention of the pro football world on this northeastern Ohio city, the birthplace in 1920 of the National Football League.

Sharing the billing with the induction rites is the annual AFC - NFC Hall of Fame game pitting the Washington Redskins against the Cincinnati Bengals. The game will mark the first appearance in Canton for the Bengals while the Redskins first played here in 1965, defeating the Detroit Lions, 20-3.

Game time is 4 p.m. EDT and the contest will be carried live on ABC-TV's coast-to-coast network as a part of the Wide World of Sports series. Taped highlights of the enshrinement will be shown at halftime on the ABC telecast.

The 1975 class of enshrinees includes Roosevelt Brown, George Connor, Dante Lavelli and Lenny Moore and increases to 85 the number of pro grid greats who have been inducted since the Hall first opened in September, 1963.

Brown joined the 1953 Giants as obscure 27th-round draft choice from Morgan State, where he had been a two-time Black All-America choice. A 6-3, 255-pounder with massive arms and a narrow waist, Brown held the starting right offensive tackle job for 13 years. Blessed with outstanding speed and unusual agility, Rosey became a specialist at keeping the ponderous defensive ends of the NFL away from the New York quarterbacks.

During Brown's career, the Giants won six divisional titles and the NFL crown in 1956. In that championship year, Rosey was named AP's Offensive Lineman of the Year in the NFL. He was an All-NFL choice eight straight years from 1956 through 1963 and he played in nine Pro Bowls during this period.

PAST GRID GREATS — The names and busts of Dante Lavelli, Lenny Moore, Roosevelt Brown and George Conner will be added to the Football Hall of Fame - the home of such grid greats as Lou Groza, Red Grange and Sammy Baugh. The four new members will be inducted Saturday at Canton preceding the annual Hall of Fame game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the Washington Redskins.

Connor joined the Bears as a two-way tackle in 1948 but soon the Bears recognized his possibilities as a big, fast and agile linebacker. It is here that the 6-3, 240-pound Connor made his greatest mark in pro football.

During his eight-year career, he won all NFL acclaim at three different positions — offensive tackle, defensive tackle and linebacker. In 1951 and 1952, he won all-loop honors on both the offensive and defensive platoons. During this period, George played in the first four Pro Bowls.

A product of De LaSalle high school in Chicago, Connor enjoyed an exceptional college career, winning all-American honors three times, once as a Holy Cross freshman in 1943 and then at Notre Dame in 1946 and 1947. The first round draft pick of the New York Giants in 1946, George eventually signed as a rookie with the Bears two years later.

Like his long-time teammate Lou Groza, who was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1974, Lavelli turned pro in 1946 after a brief three-game collegiate career at Ohio State under Paul Brown, the man who was organizing the new Cleveland team in the AAFC.

The Hudson, Ohio, native not only beat out many more experienced candidates but he led the new league in pass receiving in his rookie season with 40 catches for 643 yards. Dante won all-AAFC honors in both his first two seasons and later earned all-NFL accord in 1951 and 1953. He also played in three Pro Bowl games.

A 6-2, 186-pound speedster from Reading, Pa., Moore, after a brilliant college career at Penn State, was drafted No. 1 by the Colts in 1956. He quickly lived up to his rave notices by winning Rookie-of-the-Year acclaim.

Since Moore could both catch passes and run with the ball better than most NFL stars, he became a perfect running mate for passing ace Johnny Unitas during the years the Colts were ruling the pro football world. He earned all-NFL honors five times and appeared in seven Pro Bowls.

For the first five years, Lenny split his time between flanker and running back but he became a full-time halfback in 1961. As a result, he shows impressive career statistics in several categories. His 5174 yards rushing and his 678 points scored rank him among the lifetime Top 20 in both categories.

Ohio House passes 'sunshine' measure

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A bill requiring state and local government bodies to conduct their business at meetings open to the public has cleared the Ohio House 86-7.

The so-called "sunshine law" now returns to the Senate for consideration of House changes.

Rep. Thomas P. Gilmartin, D-57 Youngstown, successfully fended off a series of attempts to change the bill on the House floor Monday night, including one he claimed would have rendered it useless.

Gilmartin objected in particular to the amendment by Minority Leader Charles F. Kurfess, R-83 Perrysburg, to delete language that seeks to nullify any action at an open meeting which had been discussed previously by members of the body taking the action.

Kurfess claimed the language was unworkable and overly restrictive. He denied Gilmartin's charge that the minority leader was trying to "throw a curve" at the sponsors.

Kurfess' amendment was tabled by a vote of 50-42.

The Wood County lawmaker was successful in another substantive amendment that removed political party caucuses from a list of exceptions granted under the bill.

That amendment was adopted by a voice vote, but only after Kurfess explained that party caucuses were not included in the bill's definition of a "public body" and were exempt anyway.

Rep. A. G. Lancione, D-99 Bellaire, offered a successful amendment that deleted the bill's criminal penalties. He said civil remedies provided in the measure, namely removal from office, were "dire enough." The House agreed 75-12.

Other defeated amendments, which garnered only scattered support would have required public agencies, upon request, to permit televising of their proceedings; mandated that public bodies provide written minutes of meetings "at reasonable cost," and said that judges, instead of being empowered to remove a public official from office, could only set a date for a recall election to let the public official's constituents decide the issue.

Exceptions granted under the bill — meetings that may continue to be held in private — include those that deal with pardons and paroles, security arrangements, attorney consultations, sale or purchase of land, labor negotiations, and complaints being heard but not yet substantiated by the state Ethics Commission.

Clopay Corp. ponders move

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Clopay Corp. chairman John R. Strauss announced Monday that the firm has tentative plans to relocate its homewares division manufacturing operation in Covington, Tenn.

The move would affect some 325 Cincinnati workers.

The Cincinnati plant is one of nine manufacturing facilities of diversified housewares.

Clopay, which makes its headquarters in Cincinnati, also announced significant gains in both quarterly and half-year earnings.

Rhodes on stand at Kent trial

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes was to face claims today he encouraged use of unreasonable force five years ago in dealing with student demonstrators at Kent State University.

Rhodes also is accused of improperly usurping authority of the Ohio Highway Patrol, the Portage County sheriff's office, city police and Kent State police by ordering Ohio National Guardsmen to Kent during a weekend of rioting.

He was to take the witness stand in the $46 million damages trial stemming from the 1970 Kent State shootings.

The shooting victims charge that the governor encouraged use of unreasonable force in dealing with demonstrators by "the sound and fury" of his remarks at a news conference the day before the shootings.

Also on today's witness list was Michael W. Delaney, a former guard public relations man. Delaney said in a pretrial statement the governor pledged at the news conference to "use all necessary force" to keep the peace in Kent.

Rhodes was expected to testify that nothing he said was to be taken as instructions to law enforcement officials.

Lawyers for nine students wounded and parents of four students killed in the May 4, 1970, incident claim Rhodes was trying to portray himself as a law and order candidate near the close of a losing campaign for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination.

Rhodes is one of 41 present or former state officials and guardsmen who are defendants.

The governor's appearance was taken as a signal that the victims had nearly concluded presenting their case. The way was cleared for Rhodes' testimony after attorneys finished examining the senor Guard officer on campus the day of the shooting and the university president at the time.

Ohio woman sues Exxon

NEW YORK (AP) — An Ohio woman has sued officials of Exxon Corp., charging that over a decade they used $59 million of the giant oil firm's money to bribe Italian politicians.

In her stockholder's complaint, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Joan Levine Gall of Cincinnati named Exxon board chairman J.K. Jamieson and president C.C. Garvin Jr. as defendants.

She alleged that "the $59 million was used as bribes and waste of corporate assets to secure special political favors as well as other illegal commitments and was improperly contributed to Italian political parties and others from 1963 to 1974.

"Dummy invoices and unsupported cash payment requests were amongst the methods used to conceal the contributions."

The plaintiff, executrix of the estate of her father, Nathan Levine, asked unspecified damages allegedly suffered by Exxon, and reimbursement to the corporation from the directors.

The company had no comment.

JAMES MORRIS IN TREIGLE'S ROLE

CINCINNATI (AP) — James Morris, Metropolitan Opera basso, will sing Mephistopheles in the Cincinnati Opera's new production of "Faust," which opens the season June 18.

In planning the new production, which is sponsored by the Corbett Foundation, the late Norman Treigle was cast as the devil. The production is slated for three opera companies, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Houston.

They have all settled on American James Morris who, in January, was scheduled to sing the Commendatore in "Don Giovanni" at the Met and stepped in at the last moment to sing the title role, very successfully.

Morris, who never has sung Mephistopheles, will sing it in September in Philadelphia when the Lyric and Grand Opera companies merge and will open the Houston season Nov. 21.

They'll Do It Every Time

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Complete Physical Before Marriage

When I was 18 I was infected with gonorrhea. I was treated and told that I was cured.

Now, at 28 I'm seriously thinking about marriage. Can I still transmit this disease to my future wife?

Mr. J. W., Ken.

Dear Mr. W.:

Your sense of responsibility is admirable. Unfortunately, there are far too many young people who, having acquired a venereal disease, do not seek treatment. Consequently, they spread their disease to others.

Since you were effectively treated for your gonorrheal infection, there is little reason to suspect that any remnants of it remain.

Nevertheless, an examination with smears and cultures should be done to give you the added assurance you seek.

A premarital blood test for syphilis does not indicate the absence or presence of gonorrhea. It is for this reason that a complete physical examination by the physician is one of the great gifts that a young couple can give to each other before marriage.

There is no substitute for this. Yet, far too many people impose on their doctor the phrase, "Just sign this" as a substitute for a thorough examination.

* * *

My doctor refused to take a cinder out of my eye. He sent me to a specialist who took a fraction of a second to remove it. I felt annoyed when I had to pay his fee.

Mr. T. G., Ohio

Dear Mr. G.:

You really have no justification for your annoyance. In fact, your reaction should be one of gratitude to your doctor who had the good judgment to know his limitations in such a matter.

The cinder may have been embedded in a highly sensitive part of the eye requiring special care.

Referring you to a specialist was entirely correct. It is a testimonial to his expert ability that it took only a "fraction of a second" to remove the cinder.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

Bridge is much more a question of how many or how few mistakes you make rather than how frequently you make brilliant bids or plays.

Oddly enough, the most common errors are due to the tendency of players to follow general rules blindly — instead of branching out on their own when the situation calls for it.

Consider this deal where West was faced with the problem of what to lead after cashing the A-K-Q of clubs. Actually, he led a spade, hoping to find his partner with the king, and declarer easily made the contract.

But this was not a very good play for West to make. He should have realized that not only was South highly likely to have the king of spades for his opening bid, but that even if East had the king there was nothing to be gained by leading a spade at this point.

Instead, West should have played the four of clubs at trick four! This would have cut declarer down to size after East ruffed with the ten and made West's jack the setting trick.

West should reason that not only is there a reasonable chance of finding partner with a high trump — in which case the fourth club lead will beat the contract — but that nothing will be lost if East does not have a high trump to ruff with.

It must be granted that a defender seldom makes a play of the type recommended here — because most of us have been indoctrinated with the precept that you never give declarer a ruff and discard.

However, this is not really a ruff-discard situation where declarer can gain a trick by the club lead, and it therefore behooves West to fire a club at declarer at trick four because it offers by far the best chance of stopping the contract.

FBI phone book deep, dark secret

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the FBI's best-kept secrets is its telephone directory.

Hardly anyone outside the FBI has one and not even the attorney general has one, although his aides say he doesn't really need it.

Reporters and other private citizens cannot get one, not even by petitioning for it under the Freedom of Information Act which is supposed to, and sometimes does, open all sorts of government files to public view.

This reporter tried that route but only gained one page of the directory after Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi overruled the FBI. That page lists the numbers for FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley's office and for the offices of 10 of the 13 FBI divisions. The phone numbers for Kelley and all 13 divisions long have been listed in the Justice Department directory which is routinely provided to reporters.

The page that Levi released also includes the numbers for the FBI gymnasium, the guard captain, and the cafeteria. A reporter might cover the FBI for 30 years and never need those numbers.

Reporters who occasionally have glimpsed one of the secret directories believe it contains an alphabetical list of the thousands of headquarters employes, their division assignment, room numbers and telephone numbers.

Levi and Kelley argued that a reporter doesn't need a phone book because the main switchboard operator will put through calls to any FBI employe. That sometimes works and sometimes doesn't.

This exercise began last Feb. 21, in an effort to obtain a necessary tool of reporting. On March 14, Kelley denied the request, citing the sections of the FOI Act exempting certain internal records and personnel files from public disclosure. And he wrote in a letter:

"I am aware that the information you requested would be vital to certain foreign intelligence services intent upon disrupting or otherwise thwarting our activities. I am therefore concerned that public disclosure of this information could impede our ability to carry out our investigative responsibilities."

Besides, he said, reporters already have the names and telephone numbers for the agents designated to respond to press inquiries. The spokesman deliver only the agency's official response and they often don't have the requested data or take hours or days to provide it.

Kelley's decision was appealed to Levi who replied on July 17, "I have decided to affirm the action of Director Kelley in this case with a single modification" — the page he ordered released.

"Failure to have access to this directory affects the public not at all," Levi wrote. He said the FBI switchboard will connect any caller with the individual he requests or with "the appropriate office to deal with the caller's problem."

The attorney general said he was acting to protect the privacy of FBI employes.

It's rare that we get through a class session at CKFN without saying something about slide spotting but we still haven't gotten through to some people. You see, when those slides come back from the processing lab they're not ready to project yet — not 'til they're spotted. Now if you are the only person that will ever handle that slide the spotting is not quite so important, however it is most helpful. But whenever someone else must project that slide it must, I mean must, be spotted. That's the only way the projectionist knows how to orient the thing in the projector to make it come out right on the screen. The spot should be placed in the lower left corner of the slide as you look at it the way the scene looked when you shot it. Then, you see, if you place your thumb over the spot and place it in the projector (assuming you're right-handed) the slide will be up-side-down and the projected image will be right-side-up on the screen. Follow all that?

Speaking of slide orientation, you wouldn't believe how many people with a 35 mm camera always take pictures with the camera held horizontally the way it was on the shelf in the camera shop. It hasn't sunk in that that camera can be turned to shoot a vertical. You wouldn't believe how many people photograph a person standing with a horizontal format. Why? It don't make sense to me. The pros shoot mostly verticals, that is unless they're doing 'scapes, but most beginners seem to forget that the camera can be turned to vertical.

Murder trial scheduled

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Jury selection was set to begin Tuesday in the murder trial of Robert Paul Sander, accused of shooting five persons to death March 2 at a Smith River restaurant in Del Norte County.

Sander, 24, a former department store employe in Cincinnati, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Del Norte County Superior Court Judge Frank S. Petersen, who transferred the trial to Shasta County because of pretrial publicity, said Sander was to be examined by three psychiatrists before the trial begins.

Petersen said approximately 30 witnesses may be called in a trial that could last two weeks.

The judge said he has advised attorneys not to discuss the case to avoid cause for a second change of venue.

Chenault trial won't be moved

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The trial of Cincinnati Vice Mayor William Chenault, who faces charges of impropriety in office, will likely not be moved out of Hamilton County after all, according to Chenault's attorney.

Attorney Gene Mesh said Monday that he is no longer considering a change of venue.

Mesh said however that he will move today for separate trials on the six counts because the case involves "too much for the jurors to sort out."

Chenault is charged with four counts of falsification of official record, and single counts of theft in office and embezzlement.

The trial is set to start August 18.
